

Critique the tactics used by one American environmental group.

Radical environmental groups reached prominence in the American discourse, through the latter decades of the twentieth century, by focusing on the movement of direct action to defend the environment. The most well-known of such groups is Earth First!, a grassroots organisation consisting of individuals that are best characterised as "eco-warriors". Founded by five men including Dave Foreman, Earth Firsters used tactics that went beyond conventional direct action and instead focused on civil disobedience and ecotage as a means to embody their brand of radical ecology.

This thesis will analyse and critique the tactics used by the Earth First! environmental group. In order to understand the motives of these "eco-warriors" an assessment of the ideals of deep ecology as well as the circumstantial genesis of Earth First! will be displayed as a counter measure to the moderate mainstream views.

Infrastructure is a key component in analysing organisations, and Earth First! is fundamentally a grassroots system, keen to distance themselves from the tidy bureaucracy of the mainstream. The significance of the group's identity at grassroots level will be assessed, notably the apparent factions, when compared to other established environmental groups. The model of factions creates its own problems as well as disadvantages.

Earth First!'s own brand of direct action will then be scrutinised, most notably the controversial use of tree spiking among their flagship "monkey-wrenching" devices in order to draw publicity towards an environmental issue. The issue of eco-terrorism will be addressed.

To finish, a relevant critique of Earth First! shall be established in relation to its context among the environmental movement; whether or not it has made any substantial improvements while also looking at its present state today.

The term "deep ecology" first appeared in Arne Naess' article 'The Shallow and The Deep, Long-Range Ecology Movements'.¹ More of a philosophical idea, deep ecology retains the premise that the environment a biocentric equality to exist through preservation, while at the same time downplaying the importance of humans on this world. There are two prominent points among Naess' and George Sessions outlined principles of deep ecology that arguably forms the basis of radical ecology. First, humans "have no right to reduce" the richness and diversity of the environment, and second, "present

Critique Of Earth:

Our Earth Matters Bharat H. Desai, 2021-06-15 On 21 May 2019 it was officially recognized that we are now living in the Anthropocene our earth's latest geological epoch named for the unmistakable imprint of human activities This announcement came almost 60 years after the publication of Rachel Carson's landmark work of environmental writing Silent Spring and next year 2022 it will be 50 years since the first UN Conference on the Human Environment held in Stockholm in June 1972 This book Our Earth Matters Pathways to a Better Common Environmental Future is a special issue of the journal Environmental Policy and Law which was first published in 1975 It presents 21 invited contributions by outstanding scholars from around the world which examine existing global regulatory approaches processes instruments and institutions for the protection of the global environment The articles are grouped under four headings Prognoses Processes Problematique and Prospects and in them the authors have sought to explore answers to the existential environmental crisis They urge us to ponder our reckless destruction of natural spaces endangering of plant and animal species poisoning of the environment and general disturbance of our essential ecological processes The primary objective of the book is to raise the awareness of the global audience by inspiring scholars and decision makers to re-examine current global approaches to environmental issues and explore the future trajectory with new ideas and frameworks for international environmental governance in the 21st century and beyond The book will be of interest to all those working to secure the sustainable future of the human race on our only abode planet Earth Bharat H Desai is Professor of International Law and Jawaharlal Nehru Chair in International Environmental Law Centre for International Legal Studies School of International Studies Jawaharlal Nehru University New Delhi Editor in Chief of the journal Environmental Policy Law Amsterdam IOS Press and of the Yearbook of International Environmental Law Oxford OUP

Uniting Green Criminology and Earth Jurisprudence Jack Lampkin, 2020-11-15 As planet Earth continues to absorb unprecedented levels of anthropogenically induced environmental and climatic change two similar academic schools of thought have emerged in recent years both making sustained efforts to explain how and why this state of affairs has evolved These two disciplines are known as green criminology and earth jurisprudence Whilst these areas of study can be seen as sub-disciplines of their parent subjects law and criminology this book proposes that much can be achieved by authors uniting and collaborating on their academic work By doing this it is argued that green criminology stands to benefit from a discipline that places mother nature at the heart of lawmaking and therefore providing a solution to the environmental harms identified by green criminologists Furthermore earth jurisprudence will profit from utilising the breadth of academic work produced within the green criminology academic arena Therefore this book seeks to unite green criminology and earth jurisprudence in an effort to find solutions to the extraordinary environmental problems that the world now faces

Foundations of the Earth H.H. Shugart, 2014-07-08 Where were you when I laid the foundation of the earth God asks Job in the Whirlwind Speech but Job cannot reply This passage which some environmentalists and religious scholars treat as a green creation myth drives H H Shugart s extraordinary investigation in which he uses verses from God s speech to Job to explore the planetary system animal domestication sea level rise evolution biodiversity weather phenomena and climate change Shugart calls attention to the rich resonance between the Earth s natural history and the workings of religious feeling the wisdom of Bible scripture and the arguments of Bible ethicists The divine questions that frame his study are quintessentially religious and the global changes humans have wrought on the Earth operate in not only the physical chemical and biological spheres but also the spiritual realm Shugart offers a universal framework for recognizing and confronting the global challenges humans now face the relationship between human technology and large scale environmental degradation the effect of invasive species on the integrity of ecosystems the role of humans in generating wide biotic extinctions and the future functioning of our oceans and tides
