JOHN BELLAMY FOSTER, BRETT CLARK, AND RICHARD YORK

In recent years the intelligent design movement, or creationism in a more subtle guise, has expanded the attack on the teaching of evolution in U.S. public schools, while promoting an ambitious "Wedge strategy" aimed at transforming both science and culture throughout society. As explained in our book Critique of Intelligent Design: Materialism versus Creationism from Antiquity to the Present (Monthly Review Press, 2008), this has reignited a 2,500-year debate between materialism and creationism, science and design. The argument from design (the attempt to discern evidence of design in nature, thereby the existence of a Designer) can be dated back to Socrates in the fifth century BCE. While the opposing materialist view (that the world is explained in terms of itself, by reference to material conditions, natural laws, and contingent, emergent phenomena, and not by the invocation of the supernatural) to which Socrates was responding also dates back to the fifth century BCE in the writings of the atomists Leucippus and Democritus. The latter perspective was developed philosophically into a full-fledged critique of design by Epicurus in the third century BCE, which later influenced the scientific revolution of the seventeenth century.

Today's intelligent design proponents like William Dembski, senior fellow of the Seattle-based Discovery Institute's Center for Science and Culture, continually affirm that the philosophical foundations of the materialist views they oppose can be traced back to Epicurus in antiquity ("all roads," Dembski observes, echoing Epicurus's first century BCE Roman follower Lucretius, "lead to Epicurus and the train of thought he set in motion"). However, the three greatest materialist enemies of design in modern times are said to be Darwin, Marx, and Freud. It was Darwin who in a critique first used the term "intelligent design" in its modern sense, while Marx and Freud both developed materialist critiques of religion and design.

In attacking evolution and materialism, proponents of intelligent design emphasize that the world is too specified and irreducibly complex to have been the product of "pure chance." In contrast, materialist-dialectical thinkers from antiquity to the present have

Critique of Heaven Arend Theodoor van Leeuwen,1972 With particular reference to Marx s critique of religion     The Criticism of Heaven and Earth Roland Boer,2013-10-15 Widely read and commented upon this series is recognised as a key factor not only in breathing new life into the debates over Marxism and religion but also in opening up fresh areas of research These new areas have been taken up in further studies by scholars     Critique of Earth Arend Theodoor van Leeuwen,2003-02-27 In the second series of van Leeuwen s Gifford Lectures the author examines the transmutation from the critique of heaven into the critique of earth His thesis is that Marx s critique of religion is seen not in his opposition to religion but in his ideas on political economy This thesis is undergirded with analysis of Marx s critique of political economy from 1842 to Das Kapital Marx s biography works itself out at three levels of critique from religion via politics to political economy Das Kapital sums up the whole of Marx s thought The analysis of the mystical character of commodities is both the key to the critique of Christianity with its cult of abstract man and the key to the critique of political economy the fetishism of which emerges clear as the noon day whenever it has to do with capital The reception of Marx s critique in the categories structure and method of traditional theology is not feasible a transformation of theology is necessary To put it another way reception of Marx s critique will be both cause and symptom of a self fulfilling theological transformation for which this work provides a prolegomena     Critique of Heaven Arend Th. van Leeuwen,1972     Criticism of Heaven Roland Boer,2007 Why do some of the major Marxists of the twentieth century engage extensively with theology What is the influence on their other work This book explores the intersections between Marxism and theology in the work of Ernst Bloch Walter Benjamin Louis Althusser Henri Lefebvre Antonio Gramsci Terry Eagleton Slavoj Žižek and Theodor Adorno     Critique of Heaven and Earth Arend Th. van Leeuwen,1972     Criticism of Heaven and Earth Roland Boer,2007     *The ... took the same old My Way approach It took him five years to learn the right approach and along the way he discovered the real meaning of life He still loves that song but has rewritten a few of the words to reflect the truth As part of the Baby Boom generation that fast tracked this country to its current condition Al Sikes has been riding the wave with great results so he thought Somewhat like his friend Jack Al made things happen his way Fortunately he has learned some wisdom and truth in recent years He continues to direct the operations of an established management consulting firm and he enjoys his new role as a grandfather

Marvin Richardson Vincent,1897      Blake's Critique of Transcendence Peter Otto,2000 Blake s Critique of Transcendence is the first full length book to examine in any detail or consistency the relation between Blake s text and the visual designs in The Four Zoas one of the most important works in Blake s oeuvre It uncovers a Blake deeply engaged with the cultural discourses of his time in profound dialogue with Swedenborg Locke and Young In the course of this conversation Blake anatomizes a remarkable variety of cultural practices including religion science and art designed to achieve transcendence He focuses in particular on the fate of the body in cultures of transcendence developing perhaps the first theory of sexual sublimation Blake s radical visual and verbal strategies in this poem are part of an attempt to defer the movement of transcendence long enough for the reader to see the warring elements of the fallen world as the dismembered body of humanity
