Cross Cultural Practice Assessment Treatment And Training:

Cross-Cultural Practice Sharon-Ann Gopaul-McNicol, Janet Brice-Baker, 1998 Developed primarily in the consulting rooms and universities of Europe and North America traditional forms of psychological assessment and treatment are not up to the task of dealing with today's culturally diverse patients In an increasingly multicultural society where basic terms such as normality and family can have radically varying definitions it is not unusual for well meaning clinicians to inadvertently misclassify unfamiliar behaviors or beliefs as abnormal or pathological Ultimately the solution lies in educational reform In the meantime a major first step toward ensuring that ethnically different patients receive quality mental health services is the adoption of culturally sensitive assessment and intervention models such as those described in this pathbreaking book The culmination of its authors many years of experience in working with culturally diverse patients this timely guide arms practitioners with an array of innovative yet clinically grounded approaches to psychological assessment intervention and training With the help of numerous case examples drawn from their work with Asian Caribbean African American and Hispanic clients Drs Gopaul McNicol and Brice Baker illustrate a four step approach that entails assessing problems within their familial and sociocultural contexts and then tailoring interventions that take full advantage of the religious social educational familial and legal institutions that shape an individual's experiences and beliefs The authors begin with a trenchant critique of traditional mental health training in which they expose built in cultural and historical biases that effectively hobble a trainee's ability to think multiculturally They next explore a range of assessment issues describe clinically validated techniques for treating culturally diverse children parents and couples and outline best practices in report writing for linguistically and culturally diverse clients In their discussion of clinical issues that arise when dealing with culturally diverse families they detail a proven Multicultural Multimodal Multisystems Multi CMS approach to intervention Returning to the topic of education in the final section they outline the major competencies needed to develop a trainee's multicultural skills and offer valuable training suggestions for professors and clinical supervisors Describing a dynamic new approach to cross cultural assessment and treatment Cross Cultural Practice is valuable reading for both professionals and students in mental health A dynamic new approach to cross cultural assessment and treatment The Global Village presaged by Marshall McLuhan in the 1960s has arrived with a vengeance For many mental health professionals this brings with it the daunting challenge of working with patients with a vast array of beliefs values customs and behaviors This groundbreaking book helps clinicians meet the challenge of assessing and treating diverse clients by arming them with a bold new multicultural approach Using numerous case examples drawn from their years of practice with Asian Caribbean African American and Hispanic clients the authors Describe proven techniques for assessing culturally diverse children parents and couples Develop a proven Multicultural Multimodal Multi systems Multi CMS approach to intervention Expose the cultural biases at the core of conventional mental health training Outline the major competencies needed to develop a trainee's multicultural skills and develop alternative approaches to clinical training      Multicultural School Psychology Competencies Danielle Martines, 2008-07-08 This is a practical resource guide presenting lecturers and students with material which will help apply the theory of multicultural school psychology and counselling in practice Its emphasis is on helping educational psychologists to develop and refine multicultural competencies and assessments      Handbook of Multicultural Perspectives on Stress and Coping Paul T. P. Wong, Lilian C. J. Wong, 2007-02-15 Has the developing world developed modern concepts of stress Are coping methods the same around the globe Such questions are not simple to answer and until recently few knew to ask them In recent years Western psychologists have recognized that their prevailing views of psychology do not always translate worldwide and that no culture has a monopoly on either stress or coping The Handbook of Multicultural Perspectives on Stress and Coping was created to address this realization This unique volume moves beyond simple comparisons of behaviors in other countries by clarifying critical concepts in stress and coping analyzing and synthesizing vast amounts of global data and identifying constructs and methodologies necessary for meaningful cross cultural research An international multiethnic panel of forty five contributors presents elegant studies of stress survival and resilience as cultures evolve and countries interact including Personal transformation as a coping strategy Psychological skills that enhance intercultural adjustment Individual versus collectivist values in coping Buddhist and Taoist traditions in coping The cumulative effects of historical environmental and political stressors on nations in the Middle East Specific cross cultural perspectives from Latino American families to Canadian aboriginal peoples to minority university students The editors have assembled a vital store of knowledge raising crucial implications for clinicians working with immigrant international populations and evaluating the current state of theory research and assessment The Handbook documents major steps toward scientific advancement and human understanding      Hispanic Journal of Behavioral Sciences ,1999      Handbook of Multicultural Assessment Lisa A. Suzuki, 2001 This book offers the most current information on multicultural assessment issues and applications of the most popular measures and assessment practices It includes innovative ideas for conducting assessments with minority populations      Cultural Competence Compendium ,1999      Crossing Cultural Borders Shigemi Inaga, Kenneth L.
