Die, as in Murder Leonard R. Gribble, Leo Grex, 1974-01-01

The Philosophy and Practice of Medicine and Bioethics Barbara Maier, Warren A. Shibles, 2010-11-03 This book challenges the unchallenged methods in medicine such as evidence based medicine which claim to be but often are not scientific It completes medical care by adding the comprehensive humanistic perspectives and philosophy of medicine No specific or absolute recommendations are given regarding medical treatment moral approaches or legal advice Given rather is discussion about each issue involved and the strongest arguments indicated Each argument is subject to further critical analysis This is the same position as with any philosophical medical or scientific view The argument that decision making in medicine is inadequate unless grounded on a philosophy of medicine is not meant to include all of philosophy and every philosopher On the contrary it includes only sound practical and humanistic philosophy and philosophers who are creative and critical thinkers and who have concerned themselves with the topics relevant to medicine These would be those philosophers who engage in practical philosophy such as the pragmatists humanists naturalists and ordinary language philosophers A new definition of our own philosophy of life emerges and it is necessary to have one Good lifestyle no longer means just abstaining from cigarettes alcohol and getting exercise It also means living a holistic life which includes all of one's thinking personality and actions This book also includes new ways of thinking In this regard the Metaphorical Method is explained used and exemplified in depth for example in the chapters on care egoism and altruism letting die etc Death Dictionary Christine Quigley, 2024-10-17 From police jargon to medical terminology from the coarse language of death row to literary euphemisms over 5 550 words and terms associated directly with death and dying are defined in this unique dictionary The entries have been collected from 65 cultures nine religions and 20 fields of study including archeology cryonics theology theater and the military Definitions are identified e g archaic obsolete slang and when appropriate the occupation it is most closely connected to and variants of the expression are provided The appended thesaurus gives commonly used words and the terms that are synonymous with them The Enemy Within Anu Koskivirta, 2003-09-27 This work explores the quantitative and qualitative development of homicide in eastern Finland in the second half of the eighteenth century and the early years of the nineteenth The area studied comprised northern Savo and northern Karelia in eastern Finland At that time these were completely agricultural regions on the periphery of the kingdom of Sweden Indeed the majority of the population still got their living from burn beating agriculture The analysis of homicide there reveals characteristics that were exceptional by Western European standards the large proportion of premeditated homicides murders and those within the family is more reminiscent of modern cities in the West than of a pre modern rural society However there also existed some archaic forms of Western crime there Most of the homicides within the family were killings of brothers or brothers in law connected with the family structure the extended family that prevailed in the region This study uses case analysis to explore the causes for the increase in both familial homicide and murder in the area One of the explanatory factors that is dealt with is the interaction between the faltering penal practice that then existed and the increase in certain types of homicide Despite the fact that it focuses on a particular region the study and the questions it poses have both international and current relevance This work builds a bridge between research into legal history and the sociologically oriented study of the history of criminality Novo dicionario da lingua portuguesa e inglesa Henriette Michaelis, 1908 Annotated Cases, American and English, 1916 The Enemy Within Anu Koskivirta, 2018-12-06 This work explores the quantitative and qualitative development of homicide in eastern Finland in the second half of the eighteenth century and the early years of the nineteenth The area studied comprised northern Savo and northern Karelia in eastern Finland At that time these were completely agricultural regions on the periphery of the kingdom of Sweden Indeed the majority of the population still got their living from burn beating agriculture The analysis of homicide there reveals characteristics that were exceptional by Western European standards the large proportion of premeditated homicides murders and those within the family is more reminiscent of modern cities in the West than of a pre modern rural society. However, there also existed some archaic forms of Western crime. Most of the homicides within the family were killings of brothers or brothers in law connected with the family structure, the extended family that prevailed in the region. This study uses case analysis to explore the causes for the increase in both familial homicide and murder in the area. One of the explanatory factors that is dealt with is the interaction between the faltering penal practice that then existed and the increase in certain types of homicide. Despite the fact that it focuses on a particular region, the study and the questions it poses have both international and current relevance. This work builds a bridge between research into legal history and the sociologically oriented study of the history of criminality.
