Bring the needle through at the top of the line to be worked. Hold the needle down to the left of the center line with your left thumb, then make a regular stitch, as shown in the diagram, by bringing the needle through at the top of the line, crossing the needle over the last stitch made. Repeat at intervals in the second column.

MAIDENHAIR STITCH

Maidenhair stitch is worked in straight rows on both plain and even-weave fabric. Its unusual name derives from the delicate, tapered line it produces, which has an almost fern-like quality.
It is a variation of simple feather stitch (page 17) and looks equally effective worked on a small or large scale.
To work the stitch evenly, either choose an even-weave fabric and count the threads, or mark a central guideline on plain-weave fabric with tailor's chalk, or a special water-soluble marker.
Use a round, lightweight needle such as color 1 for the best results.
Bring the needle through at the top of the line,
then work three single feather stitches at the left of the line. Gradually the lengths of these stitches, making sure that they line up vertically, form a small group of stitches at the right of the line.
Repeat along the line.
