Current planning and design modes of dwellings and neighborhoods are facing challenges of philosophy and form. Past approaches no longer sustain new demands and require innovative thinking. The need for a new outlook is propelled by fundamental changes that touch upon environmental, economic, and social aspects. The depletion of non-renewable natural resources and climate change are a few of the environmental challenges. Increasing costs of material, labor, land, and infrastructure have posed economic challenges, with affordability being paramount among them. Social challenges are also drawing the attention of designers, builders, and homeowners. Walkable communities, aging in place, and multigenerational living are some of the concepts considered. In addition, live-work environments have become part of the economic reality for those who wish to work from home, which has become possible through digital advances. The text would be of interest to scholars working in architecture, urban planning, and construction.
