The Provenance of Deuteronomy 32 Paul Sanders, 2021-11-15 This study offers an extensive survey of previous literature dealing with the provenance of the song in Deuteronomy 32 a renewed discussion of its text and language as well as an analysis of its poetic structure with the help of a new method The author tests the tenability of older theories and proposes a new theory based on systematic research into the intertextual links with other parts of the Hebrew Bible and extra biblical literature of the Ancient Near East Separate sections are dedicated to the song s descriptions of the relationship between YHWH and the gods and to the identity of the hostile people to which the song refers The author concludes that a pre exilic date is extremely likely for the song in its entirety

Delimitation Criticism M.C.A. J. Revell,2015-10-05 In the Hebrew Bible the pausal system is a set of variations in vowelizing and stress position that marks the ends of units of various sizes Pausal forms are already well known and have long been included in grammatical works However it is rarely noticed that many pausal forms occur at unexpected positions They may be marked with any disjunctive accent or even with one of the conjunctive accents The pausal forms represent an earlier division of the text and deserve special attention In addition to the pausal forms the retraction of word stress nesigah and the use of the vowel game on conjunctive waw also appear to mark the ends of units All these indicators are included in this comprehensive study of the pausal system and in the accompanying list of terminal markers The volume contains the first classified list of all the relevant forms in the Hebrew Bible
