Contributions To The Analysis Of The Sensations:

Contributions to the Analysis of the Sensations Ernst Mach, 1897 The Analysis of Sensations, and the Relation of the Physical to the Psychological Ernst Mach, 1914 Physicist and philosopher Ernst Mach investigates the physical sensations of sight sound motion and the perceptions of space and time Mach is frank about his book incorporating both scientific and philosophical ideas While acknowledging his investigations were on the border of what science had helped humans comprehend he defends his work by stating that the manifold sensations a person experiences each day are the result of a complex interplay of biology and physics As such philosophical enquiries on the sensory experience are merited for science alone cannot encompass or quantify the various sensations with a view to explaining their precise effects on the human mind and its thought processes An example investigated by Mach is that of time how certain sensory experiences appear to make time pass slower or faster Often vivid experiences a shocking sight produce the sensation of time slowing why this occurs and how it affects the mind is discussed at length Though Mach met with both praise and opposition with the successive editions of this work he is cheerful at having aroused such debate he had appropriated aspects of science to philosophic ends

Contributions to the Analysis of the Sensations Ernst Mach, 1998 Insisting that sensation constitutes the data for all science physical and psychological Mach articulated an early form of scientific positivism that provided Lyle and Titchener with an epistemological framework for their emerging views Conceiving of space and time not as Kantian categories but as the immediate data of experience Mach also helped lay the groundwork for the gestaltists later recognition of the phenomenal status of extension and duration Contributions to the Analysis of the Sensations Ernst Mach, 2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher Not indexed Not illustrated 1897 edition Excerpt INVESTIGATION OF SPACE SENSATION CONTINUED 1 i That space sensation is connected with motor processes has long since ceased to be disputed Opinions differ only as to how this connexion is to be represented 2 If two congruent images of different colors fall in succession on the same parts of the retina they are at once recognised as identical figures We may therefore regard different space sensations as connected with different parts of the retina But that these space sensations are not unalterably restricted to particular parts of the retina we perceive on moving I To my knowledge the matter treated in the preceding chapter has not yet been discussed except in three small works of my own The considerations of the present chapter moreover are for me founded upon those of the preceding chapter I indicate here the methods by which I have myself gotten clear regarding the sensation of space without laying the least claim to that which has been accomplished by others in this direction particularly by the theory of Hering The extensive literature of this subject is moreover too imperfectly known to me to give exact references on all points The point of Hering's theory which I regard as the most important I will especially notice our eyes freely and voluntarily whereby the objects observed do not change their position or form although their images are displaced on the retina If I look straight before me fixing my eyes upon an object O an object A which is reflected on the retina in a at a certain distance below the point of most distinct vision appears to me to be situated at a certain height If I now raise my eyes fixing them upon B A retains its former height It would necessarily appear lower down if the The Philosophical Review
