essays seven of which are previously unpublished reflect the broadening of critical approaches to Flannery O'Connor's work over the past decade. The essays offer both new directions for and new insights into reading O'Connor's fiction. Some essays probe issues that until recently had been ignored. Others reshape long-standing debates in light of new critical insights from gender studies, rhetorical theory, dialogism, and psychoanalysis. Topics discussed include O'Connor's early stories, her canonical status, the phenomenon of doubling, the feminist undertones of her stories, grotesqueries, and her self-denial in life and art. Commentary on O'Connor has most often centered on her regional realism and the poetics of her Catholicism. By regarding O'Connor as a major American writer and focusing on the variety of critical approaches that might be taken to her work, these essays dispel the earlier geographic and religious stereotypes and point out new avenues of study.

Since its inception in 1993, the Dobell Prize for Drawing, named in honour of the distinguished Australian artist William Dobell, has been the preeminent award for drawing in Australia. This book celebrates 20 years of the prize and presents a view of contemporary Australian drawing through 40 works: winners and additional works selected for the collection from the exhibitions by 30 artists, ranging from traditional practice to works that push the boundaries of drawing. The prize has always promoted discussion and debate about the nature of drawing and rather than impose a set definition of drawing, the appointed judge for each year determined what was selected. As the inaugural judge, Arthur Boyd, stated in 1993: "If the artist says it's a drawing, it's a drawing." The most enduring legacy of this acquisitive prize has been the formation of the Dobell Australian drawing collection at the Art Gallery of New South Wales, which now comprises over 40 works, including the winners and additional works acquired from each of the annual exhibitions. The extraordinary breadth of contemporary Australian drawing represented in the collection is reflected in this publication.
