Communication Richard Buttny, 1993-12-07 Much of our talk revolves around accounting for our own and other people's actions. We praise one person and blame another, justify our own actions, speculate on motives, tell and retell problematic events. This volume draws upon speech communication, sociology, and social psychology to offer an original approach to such accounts. Richard Buttny examines social accountability within communication contexts that range from a therapy session to welfare and broadcast news interviews from everyday conversation to discussions in a Zen monastery. Throughout his wide-ranging analysis of accounts of talk, he integrates conversational analytic methods with social constructionism. Semiotica, 1987

Managing Conflict M. Afzalur Rahim, 1989-01-12 An important contribution to the literature of organizational behavior and communication, this volume explores the strategies and issues involved in conflict management. The contributors represent a variety of academic disciplines and their treatment of the subject is both comprehensive and multidisciplinary in nature. Taking as their focus the premise that certain types and levels of conflict can have positive consequences, the authors present an in-depth look at the techniques available to manage conflict within organizations and groups between individuals and among nations. The volume is divided into five major sections, each addressing a particular aspect of conflict management. In Part One, the contributors look at organizational conflict, examining issues such as interpersonal conflict on the job, the nature of destructive criticism, and different styles of handling conflict. The second section addresses the critical relationship between communication and conflict, with separate chapters devoted to communication theory, divorce mediation, the role of argumentation in bargaining, and bargaining strategies. Subsequent sections discuss negotiation and mediation, while the final section provides an integrated perspective on conflict management theory and practice. Each section begins with an introductory essay that sets the following papers in context, making this an ideal set of readings for courses in organizational behavior, resources management, and communications. Theories of Human Communication Stephen W. Littlejohn, 1992 Includes index

Rethinking Communication International Communication Association, 1989-03 This second volume of the two-volume set Rethinking Communication presents examples of the diversity of perspectives and theoretical problems that currently occupy the attention of the field. Each of the 30 chapters exemplifies a particular paradigm or perspective by describing a body of work or a particular research project. Seeing the diversity of the field as a response to the realities of an increasingly pluralistic world, the editors hope this and the companion volume will help explain where the field is headed so scholars can seek answers to such questions as how to constitute a scholarly community in the face of existing pluralism, how to construct a coherent educational curriculum, and how to determine standards of evaluation. Cognition, Empathy & Interaction Reiko Hayashi, 1996 Conversational analysis is an interdisciplinary field that draws on cognitive science, social psychology, sociology, pragmatics, and the ethnography of communication. These various disciplines provide both qualitative and quantitative foundations for conversational analysis. The ultimate goal of this study is to investigate what communication is, what its goals are, why people talk, and how conversational goals are achieved The primary concerns of this study are to investigate the interactions among cognition emotion and social norms using the floor model proposed by Edelsky 1981 and Schultz Florio and Erickson 1982 and to further develop their model for the analysis of conversational interaction Narrative Inquiry ,2006 Expert Systems
