Deterrence and Juvenile Crime Anne L. Schneider, 2012-12-06 Americans have an abiding faith in punishment asserts Anne Schneider in her introduction of Deterrence and Juvenile Crime Dr Schneider explores this abiding faith in her volume overviews past assumptions that punishment or merely the threat of punishment necessarily deters criminal behavior She critically examines specific deterrence theories and presents the methodology used in her own research whose findings are often quite disruptive to those assumptions held so long Using data from six experimental studies in U S cities she finds that instilling a sense of citizenship is more important in reducing future criminal behavior than enhancing the certainty or severity of punishment Beyond these results the author raises some pointed issues to explain why perceptions of certainty and severity of punishment generally perform so inadequately in predicting subsequent offenses A comparison between incarceration methods and community based restitution programs as well as the implications of policy comprise a thorough discussion which focuses on the future and reflects upon the role of random experiments regarding issues of public policy initiatives

Criminology as Peacemaking Harold E. Pepinsky, Richard Quinney, 1991 Criminology has traditionally been a military science a science of war The criminal element is the enemy Repression and restraint are the primary tools of criminal justice and criminologists study how to make those tools effective in the war on crime We are beginning to realize that this is a war against ourselves and one that we are losing Our inability to make peace with crime and criminals is reflected in the paucity of our daily personal relations where we live by domination and discipline where forgiveness and mercy are seen as naive surrender to victimization The essays in this volume propose peacemaking as an effective alternative to the war on crime They range from studies of the intellectual roots of the peacemaking tradition to concrete examples of peacemaking in the community with special attention to feminist peacemaking traditions and women s experience
