of the 8th Military History Symposium United States Air Force Academy 18-20 October 1978 , Nuclear Weapons and Strategy Stephen J. Cimbala,2006-03-10 Nuclear weapons once thought to have been marginalized by the end of the Cold War have returned with a vengeance to the centre of US security concerns and to a world bereft of the old certainties of deterrence This is a major analysis of these new strategic realities The George W Bush administration having deposed the regime of Saddam Hussein in Iraq now points to a new nuclear Axis of Evil Iran and North Korea These nations and other rogue states as well as terrorists may pose key threats because they are beyond deterrence which was based on the credible fear of retaliation after attack This new study places these and other developments such as the clear potential for a new nuclear arms race in Asia within the context of evolving US security policy Detailing the important milestones in the development of US nuclear strategy and considering the present and future security dilemmas related to nuclear weapons this is a major new contribution to our understanding of the present international climate and the future Individual chapters are devoted to the key issues of missile defenses nuclear proliferation and Israel s nuclear deterrent This book will be of great interest to all students and scholars of strategic studies international relations and US foreign policy The Emerging Shield Kenneth Schaffel,1991 A Historical Sensibility Michael Howard,2020-02-14 With the death of Professor Sir Michael Howard The International Institute for Strategic Studies IISS lost not only its president emeritus but the last of its founders and intellectual parents The foremost military historian of his generation Sir Michael embodied and epitomised a historical sensibility that informed all his writing He will forever remain an icon not only for historians but for all those who acknowledge the indispensability of history and the historical sensibility for any true understanding of present events In tribute to Sir Michael and in celebration of his life and work this Adelphi book collects a selection of his remarks and writings for IISS publications over six decades as well as previously unprinted material Through this collection these works will reach a new generation of readers and be made more accessible to those fortunate enough to have read them already They illustrate Sir Michael s role in the Institute s creation and his abiding presence in its evolving intellectual life and serve as a historical document tracing the development of strategic thought and preoccupations from the 1950s to the recent past In addition to their historical value Sir Michael s conclusions retain their immediacy and power This book is therefore of direct relevance to anyone interested in contemporary events whether the professional analyst the student of international relations or the general reader      US Military Strategy and the Cold War Endgame Stephen J. Cimbala, 1995

The transition from the end of the Cold War to a new world order is both promising and perilous. The US and its NATO allies were caught largely unprepared by the rapid collapse of the Warsaw Pact, the sudden demise of the Soviet Union and the reunification of Germany, events that redrew the map of East Central Europe and shifted US security concerns eastward in Eurasia. They also redefined security as a condition based more on the prevention or containment of regional and civic conflicts compared with the Cold War expectations of global or nuclear war. The next century is certain to strain US and NATO strategy considerably if indeed NATO survives at all. A new group of interstate institutions for European security will compete for the right to claim pre-eminence in security issues. International peace keeping and peace enforcement, whether United Nations directed or regionally sponsored, will also challenge traditional definitions of military missions. Changes will also occur in the role of nuclear weapons in military strategy. US and Russian strategic nuclear forces will be drastically reduced and both states will take other steps to dampen the nuclear arms race. The antagonists of the Cold War will be the collaborators of the next century in seeking to stabilize conflicts inside and outside Europe.

Nuclear Weapons and Cooperative Security in the 21st Century Stephen J. Cimbala, 2009-09-10

This book looks at the prospects for international cooperation over nuclear weapons proliferation in the 21st century. Nuclear weapons served as stabilizing forces during the Cold War or the First Nuclear Age on account of their capability for destruction, the fear that this created among politicians and publics and the domination of the nuclear world order by two superpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union. The end of the Cold War, the dissolution of the Soviet Union and the potential for nuclear weapons acquisition among revisionist states or even non-state actors including terrorists creates the possibility of a 'wolves eat dogs' phenomenon in the present century. In the 21st century, three forces threaten to undo or weaken the long nuclear peace and fast forward states into a new and more dangerous situation: the existence of large US and Russian nuclear weapons arsenals, the potential for new technologies including missile defenses and long range precision conventional weapons, and a collapse or atrophy of the nuclear nonproliferation regime and the opening of the door for nuclear weapons to spread among more than the currently acknowledged nuclear states. This book explains how these three weakening forces interact with one another and with US and Russian policy making in order to create an environment of large possibilities for cooperative security but also of considerable danger. Instead, the choices made by military planners and policy makers will create an early twenty-first century story privileging nuclear stability or chaos. The US and Russia can and should make incremental progress in arms control and nonproliferation. This book will be of much interest to students of nuclear proliferation and arms control, strategic studies, international security and IR in general. Stephen J. Cimbala is Distinguished Professor of Political Science at Pennsylvania State University. He is the author of numerous works in the fields of international security, defense studies, nuclear arms control and other topics. He has consulted for various US government agencies and defense contractors.
