Developing Parenting Programmes:

Developing Parenting Programmes Celia Smith, 1996 Parenting Programmes: What the Parents Say Katy Smart, 2020-11-19 This book presents original research examining parents' perspectives on the structure, content and delivery of parenting programmes. It explores how parents have personally been impacted by attending such a programme and finally whether or not this might be affecting their child. Utilising an innovative mixed methods research approach based around a critical realist philosophy, the author follows 136 families through one of three parenting programmes and beyond. In doing so, she provides important new insights regarding the efficacy of the parenting programmes, demonstrating a real world application of the transplant model of parent professional practice in action. This book provides a valuable new resource for students and scholars working in the psychology of education, childhood studies and across the social sciences more broadly. It will also be of interest to policymakers and professionals involved in the development and implementation of parenting programmes.
