Narbard And Dynamics Of Economic Development : A Case Study In Odhisa. DR. Padma Charan Dhal,2025-07-17

Economic development assumes much prominence in a developing country like India and it has become an integral part of our national policy Orissa being a backward state inherits the constraints and limitations of Indian economy The acceleration of the process of economic development in the state to a great extent depends upon the financial resources and lack of adequate amount of financial resources is an impediment in the process of economic development It is an uncontrovertible fact that the financial institutions in general and institutional credit agencies in particular play a decisive role in the process of planned economic development of the country From the experience of the era of planned economic development it is clearly revealed that the efforts made in this direction have not yielded the expected and desired results It is further revealed that the constraints from which the efforts of planned economic development programmes have suffered in the state have not been mere financial but organisational inadequacies and lack of area specific planning to which coordinated effort of all concerned agencies could be directed It has been well recognised that economic development in a distorted economy like Orissa can not be achieved unless planning is made built in area specific along with need based programmes designed for rural development Since rural development is a multi faceted concept it has to be viewed in wider perspective of socio economic transformation of the society and the programmes designed for such development has to be specific and detailed at regions and local level taking into consideration the techno feasibility and economic viability Their linkages with the plans of other regions and national development should be an on going process aiming at a relatively backward and integrated area development The efforts made by National Bank for Agriculture and Rural Development in achieving this objective is highly commendable The study entitled the Role of NABARD in the Economic Development of Orissa is designed to make an in depth inquiry into the nature working and performance of the institutional credit agencies in general and the NABARD in particular in respect of developing the rural areas and meeting the credit requirements of the weaker section of the population living in a backward state like Orissa The study has been divided into eight chapters including the last chapter containing the summary of conclusions and suggesting for improvement of the performance of NABARD Chapter I deals with Research problem methodology and review of literature Chapter II discusses about the organisation management and Role of NABARD in general Chapter III outlines the Economic Profile of the state Chapter IV reviews the role of NABARD in the Development of Agriculture in the state Chapter V describes the role of NABARD in the institutional development in the state under study Chapter VI analyses the role of NABARD in the sphere of rural industrialisation in the state Chapter VII deals with the Role of NABARD in the development of weaker sections of the state and chapter Statistics and Economics
