Developing World Communications:

Global Communications ,1995 Communication and Social Change in Developing Nations Göran Hedebro,1979

Global communications : opportunities for trade and aid. ,1995 Global Communications Opportunities for Trade and Aid examines the question of how telecommunication related aid policies might be designed to support both United States trade and foreign aid goals Communication and information technologies are particularly well suited in this regard These technologies are of critical importance in today s knowledge based global economy Not only do they provide the networked infrastructure on which global businesses will increasingly take place they also constitute one of the fastest growing sectors of world trade and investment There is already mounting evidence and a growing appreciation of the positive role that information and communication technologies can play in supporting economic development By targeting poor and underserved areas telecommunication based aid programs have the potential to enhance U S trade opportunities in developing countries and promote competition and telecommunications regulatory reform while at the same time providing for the communities and people most in need To lay the groundwork for developing an effective telecommunications related aid strategy the report examines the likely scenarios for the deployment of communication and information technologies in support of global trade identifies the policy issues market failures and regulatory barriers that need to be overcome and identifies and analyzes telecommunications related foreign aid strategies that the federal government might pursue to address these problems Discourses of the Developing World Shi-xu,Kwesi Kwaa Prah,María Pardo,2016-04-28 Against the backdrop of overwhelming discourse scholarship emanating from the Western cosmopolitan centres this volume offers a development centred approach to unfamiliar marginalized or otherwise disadvantaged discourses of the Third World or the Global South Written by leading researchers based in Asia Africa and Latin America respectively this book reconstructs Eastern paradigms of communication studies on the one hand and explores the discursive problems complexities aspirations and dynamics of the non Western subaltern and developing societies on the other As methodological principles the authors i adopt the cultural political stance of supporting cultural diversity and harmony at both academic and everyday levels ii draw upon Asian African and Latino scholarship in critical dialogue with the existing mainstream traditions and iii make sense of the discourses of Asia Africa and Latin America from their own local as well as global historical and intercultural perspectives This book will particularly appeal to scholars and students in the fields of discourse studies communication and cultural studies and development studies Developing World Communications Peter Purton,1990 The last five years has seen an explosion in worldwide communications This is a comprehensive reference work for all those involved in the developing world communications industry whether users specifiers buyers or suppliers It is divided into eleven major sections Each section starts with an authoritative article by one of the leading personalities in the business which will cover recent developments and their technological and social implications The bulk of each section is technical information in the form of profiles which give a description of equipment available from over 4000 manufacturers around the world

Communication for Development in the Third World Srinivas R Melkote, H Leslie Steeves, 2001-12-17 This completely revised edition builds on the framework provided by the earlier text. It traces the history of development communication, presents and critiques diverse approaches and their proponents, and provides ideas and models for development communication in the new century.

Developing the Third World Robert A. Agunga, 1997 Striding boldly where other scholars have feared to tread, Agunga offers a definitive solution strategy for people-centered development, armed with his upbringing in Africa, considerable field work experience, and knowledge of the literature. He argues that development projects and programs fail because planners and policy makers lack training in communications skills and urges governments and donor agencies to include communications professionals in their programs. New Communication Technologies in Developing Countries Jarice Hanson, Uma Narula, 2013-09-13 This volume explores how a number of developing countries, including India, Malaysia, Columbia, Brazil, and Saudi Arabia, are responding to the pressures of the information society. Infrastructural development policies and social systems are investigated, and models of information technologies and society are proposed in order to better reference the differences and similarities among the nations profiled. The authors identify the social technology perspective via the assimilation of technology in lifestyles and social systems. From this perspective, the diffusion of technologies is analyzed with a critical eye for theories of culture lag, diffusion, and innovation, and technological determinism and liberalism. The social perspective is a new addition to development studies, and the reader may see how, as the global information society comes into focus, the social dimensions are more important than some theorists originally envisioned.

International and Development Communication Bella Mody, 2003-04-29 Derived from the best-selling Handbook of International and Intercultural Communication, Second Edition, this book contains the chapters that deal with the exciting field of international and development communication, illustrating structurally how this field of study is composed and how it has grown.

Communication and Change in the Developing Countries Daniel Lerner, Wilbur Schramm, 1967

Communications Policy for National Development Majid Tehranian, Farhad Hakimzadeh, Marcello L. Vidale, 2015-10-23 Originally published in 1977, covering a wide international field and with the emphasis on communications in developing countries, this book contains chapters by eminent contributors looking at questions of policy, governance, and planning in the field of mass communications. It also considers the role of the media in national development, multi-media education, and critical theoretical issues bearing on the impact of modernization on traditional cultures. A few selected countries are discussed in detail: Iran, Brazil, India, and the People's Republic of Benin, then Dahomey, as well as the results of an international survey on the future of broadcasting. The book made recommendations for administrative reorganizations, network expansions, and research.
