Developing Minds:

Developing Minds Michael Rutter, Marjorie Rutter, 1993-06-16 Most models of human development end abruptly with adolescence. But according to the internationally renowned theorist and researcher Michael Rutter, we continue to mature throughout our life span. In this volume, Michael Rutter and Marjorie Rutter chart out in nontechnical language a comprehensive and vivid map of human growth from cradle to grave. Arguing that there are discontinuities as well as continuities to the growth process, they trace how basic aspects of psychological functioning such as emotion and cognition change over the course of life. The volume is organized around themes: anger and aggression, social relationships, intelligence, and language, rather than specific age periods. Thus, we see the parallels between life crises and challenges at different times of life, such as adolescence and old age. This original approach also reveals the full significance of both resilient and maladaptive responses to stress and adversity. The authors thoroughly mine decades of developmental research to transmute findings into brilliant nuggets of clinical wisdom. Covering all factors—genetic, social, historical, cognitive, biological—that shape human development, this pioneering book explores and explains not only the universal aspects of maturation but also how we each end up on our individual paths.

Educational Research and Innovation: Developing Minds in the Digital Age Towards a Science of Learning for 21st Century Education Kuhl Patricia K., Lim Soo-Siang, Guerriero Sonia, Van Damme Dirk, 2019-04-10 This book highlights new scientific research about how people learn, including interdisciplinary perspectives from neuroscience, the social cognitive and behavioural sciences, education, computer and information sciences, artificial intelligence, machine learning, and engineering.

Developing Minds Michael Rutter, Marjorie Rutter, 1992 This is a book about growing up: the process of development from the cradle to the coffin, and all the life changes in between. It covers growth from infancy to adolescence and beyond, including changes at puberty and responses to it, social relationships including attachment to parents and later to partners, family interaction, the development of language and intelligence, emotional development, psychosexual development, stress, aggression, and work.
