Non-Democratic Peace in South America Mila Francisco,2009-02-09 Master s Thesis from the year 2007 in the subject Politics Region Middle and South America grade Bestanden McGill University language English abstract The following study develops a structured focused comparison of two South American territorial crises the Beagle Channel Crisis between Argentina and Chile 1977 1978 and the Cenepa Crisis between Ecuador and Peru 1994 1995 From a conventional perspective the Beagle Channel Crisis should have escalated to war because it was a fully militarized inter state crisis carried out by a military dyad In contrast the Cenepa Crisis should not have ended in war because it was a democratic dyad and the dissatisfied state was the weaker power Yet the opposite happened in both cases in the Beagle Channel Crisis the escalation process was contained whereas in the Cenepa Crisis the situation escalated into an intensive war Based on a comparison of these two dyads this study argues that deterrence strategy alone is not sufficient to prevent war Only an interaction of deterrence strategy and third party involvement can contain an escalatory process constituting a tool for strengthening

Gray, 1986 Author Colin Gray maintains that there are distinctive U S and Soviet national styles which come into play in each power's nuclear strategic planning And the U S's lack of understanding of the fundamental historical and anthropological factors that make up the Soviet national style has led to poor U S policy Perhaps no issue is more critical for the U S as nuclear strategy planning this book is a statement to be reckoned with in the surrounding debate Co published with Abt Books
