Based on the newest empirical research on children with disabilities the book overcomes the limitations of the medical and social models of disability by arguing for a dialectical biopsychosocial model The proposed model builds on Vygotsky's cultural historical ideas of developmental incongruence implying that the disability emerges from the misfit between individual abilities and the cultural historical activity settings in which the child with impairments participates The book is a theoretical contribution to an updated understanding of disability from a psychological and educational perspective It focuses on the first years of the life of the child with impairment and travels through infancy toddler preschool and early school age to track the developmental trajectories of disability through the dialectical processes of cultural social individual and biological processes It discusses a number of themes that are relevant for the early development and support for children with various types and degrees of disability through the lens of Vygotsky's cultural historical developmental theories Some of the themes discussed are inclusion mental health communication aids and family life Children with Disabilities: A Longitudinal Study of Child Development and Parent Well-being Penny Hauser-Cram, Marji Warfield, Jack P.
