National Research Council,Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education,Board on Environmental Change and Society,Committee on Risk Characterization,1996-06-05 Understanding Risk addresses a central dilemma of risk decisionmaking in a democracy detailed scientific and technical information is essential for making decisions but the people who make and live with those decisions are not scientists The key task of risk characterization is to provide needed and appropriate information to decisionmakers and the public This important new volume illustrates that making risks understandable to the public involves much more than translating scientific knowledge The volume also draws conclusions about what society should expect from risk characterization and offers clear guidelines and principles for informing the wide variety of risk decisions that face our increasingly technological society Frames fundamental questions about what risk characterization means Reviews traditional definitions and explores new conceptual and practical approaches Explores how risk characterization should inform decisionmakers and the public Looks at risk characterization in the context of the entire decisionmaking process Understanding Risk discusses how risk characterization has fallen short in many recent controversial decisions Throughout the text examples and case studies such as planning for the long term ecological health of the Everglades or deciding on the operation of a waste incinerator bring key concepts to life Understanding Risk will be important to anyone involved in risk issues federal state and local policymakers and regulators risk managers scientists industrialists researchers and concerned individuals *The FTC Cigarette Test Method for Determining Tar, Nicotine and Carbon Monoxide Yields of U. Klein,2013-12-01 There is a near universal folk saying that everyone wishes to live a good long life but no one wishes for old age More contemporarily the rock and roll band Little Feat sang You know that you're over the hill when your mind's making promises your body can't fill This book is about the good long life It is a book about primary prevention strategies in the aging process it is not about preventing that process It is not about being old Instead it is about the things that individuals and the helping professionals who provide them with counsel and assistance can do to prevent the preventable problems of advancing age and to better manage those changes in functioning that cannot be prevented In short it is about extending all our capacities to the fullest so that we can better keep all those promises that we make to ourselves and others Aging is a life long process We focus here on the changes that are taking place in our selves and in our society as we age In particular we focus on what we can do to affect these changes by the choices we make and how we live This book offers primary prevention strategies for mature and older adults with the recognition that mature adulthood starts as soon as we are old enough to truly appreciate our active role in our own aging processes Working Paper Series ,2000 Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law ,1994

Is Addiction "rational"? Jonathan Gruber,Botond Köszegi,2000 A standard model of addictive process is Becker and Murphy s rational addiction model which has the key empirical prediction that the current consumption of addictive goods should respond to future prices and the key normative prediction that the optimal government regulation of addictive goods should depend only on their interpersonal externalities While a variety of previous studies have supported this empirical contention we demonstrate that these results are very fragile We propose a new empirical test for the case of cigarettes using state excise tax increases that have been legislatively enacted but are not yet effective and monthly data on consumption We find strong evidence that consumption drops when there are announced future tax increases providing more robust support for the key empirical prediction of the Becker and Murphy model But we also propose a new formulation of this model that makes only one change albeit a major one the incorporation of the inconsistent preferences which are likely to provide a much better platform for understanding the smoking decision We find that with these preferences the model continues to yield the predictions for forward looking behavior that have been tested by others and by ourselves But it has strikingly different normative implications as with these preferences optimal government policy should depend as well on the internalities imposed by smokers on themselves We estimate that the optimal tax per pack of cigarettes should be at least one dollar higher under our formulation than in the rational addiction case The Library Journal ,1993 Includes beginning Sept 15 1954 and on the 15th of each month Sept May a special section School library journal ISSN 0000 0035 called Junior libraries 1954 May 1961 Also issued separately Swedish Economic Policy Review ,2005 The Publishers Weekly ,2001 Women Making Time Elizabeth McMahon,Brigitta Olubas,2006 How do women experience time in the modern world What connections can be drawn between time action and ethical human relations From vantage points across the humanities and social sciences Women Making Time looks at how women fashion understandings of the past present and future The book reviews the ways in which feminist issues have been reduced to generational disputes between 1970s and 1990s Feminism has always looked towards the future when envisaging and enacting social change At the same time feminists have sought to recuperate forgotten and overlooked moments usually through response to the constraints faced by particular women Women Making Time is a rich and diverse collection of essays that moves through the complementary domains of past and future and into the complex now of aesthetic and cultural production By valuing the processes of loss and excess the book illuminates the complex banalities achievements and continuities of women s experiences Library Journal ,2002
