Machine Learning is the art and science of enabling machines to learn things which are not explicitly programmed. It involves an explicit machine that at each time receives a sequence of inputs. These inputs are put into the three classes of mathematical operations and concepts of machine learning: the point sets in a given set for all and Machine Learning. These are the first step in the machine learning process. The second step is to learn from the data. This is done by using the machine learning algorithms, supervised/unsupervised, and semi-supervised. The machine learning process involves learning from the data and then using the data to learn. In this paper we have discussed what is machine learning and its types and how machine learning works and the key elements of ML and we have explained machine learning methods which are using today and its primary applications: advertising, Recommendation and top 7 unsupervised techniques and on different ways the computer can learn machine learning.

Machine learning is an application of artificial intelligence (AI) that provides systems the ability to automatically learn and improve from experience without being explicitly programmed. Machine learning focuses on the development of algorithms that can identify patterns and make predictions with a minimum of human intervention. Machine learning is a subfield of artificial intelligence, and it is closely related to statistics and data science. Machine learning is used in a wide variety of applications, including spam filtering, recommendation systems, and image recognition. Machine learning is a rapidly growing field, and it is expected to continue to grow in the future. Machine learning is a field of computer science which gives computers an ability to learn without being explicitly programmed. Machine learning is used in a variety of computational tasks, such as detecting and categorizing objects in images, with good performance (e.g. see e.g. applications include email filtering, recognition of speech, intrusion in machine learning), leading towards a data-driven use of the fundamental objectives of machine learning is to train computers to utilize data to solve a specified problem. In good number of applications of machine learning the classifier learning is used to design a model to differentiate between good and bad cases (e.g. spam, fraud detection). In this article, we will focus on basic of machine learning, machine learning rules and problems, and various machine learning algorithms.
