

Medical Laboratory Scientists

Did you know that behind every health practitioner and medical provider there is a Medical Laboratory Scientist (MLS)? See below how MLSs interact with the entire healthcare team to provide accurate test results to ensure adequate treatment for patients.

MLSs work with health-care professionals (DOs, MDs, PAs and NPs) to determine method of treatment based on lab results. They make critical adjustments as needed for treatment.

Phlebotomists collect and handle logistics of samples, but MLSs perform the tests and interact with physicians.

MLSs and oncology teams work together on molecular testing to gain new advancements in medicine.

MLSs work with radiologists to ensure safe administration of proper contrast and dyes.

MLSs, as part of a full biomedical team, oversee sterile conditions of equipment, water and other items involved in patient care.

MLSs work with pharmacists to monitor organisms for antibiotic resistance.
