Clear Word And Third Sight Folk Groundings And Diasporic Consciousness In African Caribbean Writing:

Clear Word and Third Sight Catherine A. John, 2004-01 Clear Word and Third Sight examines the strands of a collective African Diasporic consciousness in the works of several black Caribbean writers John shows how a shared consciousness or third sight is rooted in both pre and postcolonial cultural practices and disseminated through a rich oral tradition This consciousness has served diasporic communities by creating an alternate philosophical world sense linking those of African descent across space and time Contesting popular discourses about what constitutes culture and maintaining that neglected strains in Negritude discourse provide a crucial philosophical perspective on the connections between folk practices cultural memory and collective consciousness John examines the diasporic principles in the work of the Negritude writers Leopold Damas Aime Cesaire and Leopold Senghor She traces the manifestations and reworkings of their ideas in Afro Caribbean writing from the Eastern and French Caribbean as well as the Caribbean diaspora in the United States The authors she discusses include Jamaica Kincaid Earl Lovelace Simone Schwarz Bart Audre Lorde Paule Marshall and Edouard Glissant among others John argues that by incorporating what she calls folk groundings such as poems folktales proverbs and songs into their work Afro Caribbean writers invoke a psychospiritual consciousness which combines old and new strategies for addressing the ongoing postcolonial struggle
