Layers of the Earth

Chapter 1: Temperature and Composition

Temperature: Temperatures deep inside the earth can range from $5,000^{\circ}\text{C}$ ($9,000^{\circ}\text{F}$). That's as hot as the sun! Because of such intense pressures, atoms ~~aren't~~ ^{are} packed together, instead of having lots of space between them (as in normal air). It is already shown that there's a crust of 100 miles, and below that are liquids and solids. The temperatures are even hotter at the center of the earth, with the temperature increasing as you go deeper into the earth, being the hottest at the center.

The diagram shows a wedge-shaped cross-section of the Earth's layers. The layers are labeled: Crust (outermost, thin), Mantle (middle, thick), and Core (innermost, thick). The Mantle is further divided into the upper mantle and the lower mantle. The Core is divided into the outer core and the inner core. A globe next to the wedge shows the Earth's surface with continents and oceans.

The lithosphere is the outer layer, averaging about 1,000 ft. thick, and is slightly cooler than the asthenosphere below it. It includes what is also called the "Mantle" or Mesosphere lithosphere, or the part between the crust and the asthenosphere. The upper mantle is the hottest, the asthenosphere is about 1,000-1,500°C, and the lower mantle is the coolest, reaching temperatures over 5,000°C.

Finally, the Core is the hottest at about 5,000°C, being the "core" of the Earth.
