Lisa Perkins, Anne Whitworth, Ruth Lesser, 1997 The CAPPCI was developed as a resource for speech and language therapists for use with people with generalized cognitive impairment as in dementia or after head injury and their key conversational partners It comprises a structured interview to be conducted with the key conversational partner of the person with cognitive impairment a method for analysis of a 10 minute sample of unscripted conversation between the conversational partner and the person with cognitive difficulties and a summary profile that combines the interview and conversational sampler The CAPPCI is based on analysis of natural discourse using the methodology of Conversational Analysis CA This method drives both the content of the interview and the analysis of the conversational sample Focusing on the interaction between the person with cognitive impairment and his/her conversational partner and the ways in which the interaction is managed between them the assessment procedure is designed to drive individually targeted intervention and measure changes in interaction over time The motivating principle of the CAPPCI is recognition of the need for therapists to work in collaboration with people with cognitive impairments and their key conversational partners      Aphasiology George Albyn Davis, 2007

Aphasiology Disorders and Clinical Practice 2 offers a uniquely balanced and comprehensive presentation of aphasia encompassing both theoretical study and clinical practice Written in a highly accessible style this text carefully explains and illustrates key paradigms in research and treatment The author uses tables to summarize essential points and to provide historical overviews Structured according to a course outline the book begins with etiology and moves quickly to clinical assessment It teaches diagnostic thinking with respect to the relationships between symptoms and hidden impairments in cognitive terms This thinking is illustrated with research as well as more explicitly with assessments and treatments Through this approach a future clinician should acquire an appreciation for the scientific investigation that supports a clinical discipline The Second Edition features updated information on many topics such as functional assessments and treatments including ethnography and outcome measures and medical aspects and treatments keep the text current and competitive in the field It also includes a new chapter on dementias supplements current chapters on other cognitive disorders right hemisphere dysfunction and traumatic brain injury Each of these chapters includes additional information on rehabilitation as well as up to date information on current research The content has been reorganized within and between chapters to maximize readability and ease of use as a course text Psycholinguistics background has been restructured to improve efficiency and readability of the text Chapter 6 on Special Investigations has been eliminated from this edition and its topics have been redistributed improving the overall flow of the text      Books In Print 2004-2005 Ed Bowker Staff, Staff Bowker, Ed, 2004      Conversation Analysis Ian Hutchby, Robin Wooffitt, 2008-05-19 This volume offers a wide ranging introduction to the field of conversation analysis It offers a basic grounding in the theory and methods of the subject and demonstrates its usefulness by analysing a variety of concrete examples      Conversation Analysis Numa Markee, 2000-02-01 Conversation analysis is a methodology that originated over three decades ago as a sociolinguistic approach but has since been adopted by scholars in a variety of other areas including applied linguistics and communication It is of great utility in second language acquisition research for its demonstrations of how micro moments of socially distributed cognition instantiated in conversational behavior contribute to observable changes in the participants' states of knowing and using a new language This volume describes the methodology in detail discusses its relevance for current theories of SLA and uses two extended examples of conversational analysis to show how learners succeed or fail at the job of learning the meaning of a word or phrase in conversational context This book is one of several in LEA's Second Language Acquisition Research Series dealing with specific data collection methods or instruments Each of these monographs addresses the kinds of research questions for which the method instrument is best suited its underlying assumptions a characterization of the method instrument and extended description of its use and problems associated with its use For more information about these volumes please visit LEA s Web site at www.erlbaum.com

Conversation

Talmy Givón,1997 The papers in this volume were originally presented at the Symposium on Conversation held at the University of New Mexico in July 1995 The symposium brought together scholars who work on face to face communication from a variety of perspectives social cultural cognitive and communicative Our aim for both the symposium and this volume has been to challenge some of the prevailing dichotomies in discourse studies First the cleavage between the study of information flow and the study of social interaction Second the theoretical division between speech situation models and cognitive models Third the methodological split between the study of spontaneous conversation in natural context and the study of speech production and comprehension under controlled experimental conditions And fourth the rigid genre distinction between narrative and conversational discourse All four dichotomies have been useful either methodologically or historically But important as they may have been in the past the time has perhaps come to work toward an integrated approach to the study of human communication one that will be less dependent on narrow reductions Both the ontological primacy and the methodological challenge of natural face to face communication are self evident Human language has evolved is acquired and is practiced most commonly in the context of face to face communication Most past theory building in either linguistics or psychology has not benefited from the study of face to face communication a fact that is regrettable and demands rectification We hope that this volume tilts in the right direction
