Conversations With An Alien:

Conversations with an Alien Eric Cristofer, 2004-11 You've seen it in the movies A large imposing shape entered the sky and the leaders of the world exchange frantic telephone calls while our military forces gear up for a historic confrontation The aliens have arrived and they mean us no good Humanity is finally forced to unify to save the world Imagine a very different scenario No spaceship or stunning display of technical prowess just an engaging conversation over coffee and biscotti Conversations With An Alien is the story of the unexpected Most of all it asks one to question What would you do if you came in contact with a being from another world How would you react to the knowledge of the existence of another species If this creature was curious and questioned you about who we are and why we do the things we do would you be up to providing answers How would you explain love war money faith and the relationship between men and women And what if your visitor was well briefed on humanity but from a very unique perspective would you be open to learning to think differently What would you want to know about them and could you handle the knowledge What would the encounter do to your notion of reality and the existence of God A good conversation can be a journey as arduous and painful as climbing a mountain It can also enlighten and clarify or confound and stupify Conversations With An Alien is just such a journey Ask the questions if you dare The Alien Interviews L.
