Technological cooperation is not only costly and time consuming but also has a high attrition rate Most literature on strategic cooperation focuses mainly on issues related to cooperation formation and the reasons why firms form these cooperative partnerships However a successfully formed cooperation is not always managed well enough to achieve a satisfactory performance The knowledge of cooperative formation is necessary but insufficient to achieve a satisfactory performance The literature suggests that scholars know little about the underlying factors affecting cooperative performance A comprehensive literature review was conducted to establish the possible effects of key factors on the performance of international technological cooperation and the possible relations between key factors A qualitative pilot study was implemented to verify the practical relevance of those 12 key factors of which 6 factors have a relatively more significant effect on performance than the other 6 factors By applying theoretical modeling techniques the research framework was then constructed according to the postulated relations between 7 key factors 6 relatively more significant factors and the focal concept performance Strictly based on the definition of key factors measurement items of each key factor were carefully reviewed and selected Following the process of structural equation modeling the structural equation model in this research was constructed Unlike most previous cooperation studies a structural equation model allows researchers to examine simultaneously all the relations amongst key factors The data were collected from managers who had experience in managing a technological cooperative project with foreign partners and were then analyzed by LISREL a longstanding and widely distributed structural equation modeling computer program The result suggests that symmetric opinions commitment dependence relationships partner analyses and rewards have effects on the performance of international technological cooperation which confirms the results of the thorough and comprehensive literature review and of the qualitative pilot study In addition in the structural equation model of this research relationships and rewards have effects on commitment and partner analyses and rewards have effects on dependence which are also consistent with the literature review The findings have contributed to theory advancement in cooperation studies and to the knowledge of international business Managerial implications from the findings also provide advices which managers can proactively take to avoid the odds of success

Malaysian Business ,1997 Japanese Multinationals in the Global Economy Paul W. Beamish,Andrew Delios,Donald J. Lecraw,1997 Japanese Multinationals in the Global Economy goes beyond traditional methods of research in international business by providing new simple data comparisons on the global operations of Japanese firms A key aim of this book is to encourage other researchers to explore a new data source and expand and shape their own studies on multinationals This book will be a significant addition to the debate on the behaviour of multinational firms because it avoids the problems and restrictions involved using national government data and individual case studies The book presents key information based on the most extensive samples of multinationals at the subsidiary level using both cross sectional data and data over time The authors provide a direct comparison of US subsidiaries using the established Harvard Multinational Enterprise database and Japanese subsidiaries using the much less well known Toyo Keizai annual data. Key features include a summary description of the Toyo Keizai database, comparisons of Japanese and US multinationals based on the dates the subsidiaries entered the parent's system, annual sales levels and the equity level of the subsidiary. The data includes employment levels, expatriate management, ownership patterns and joint venture ownership structures. New data on the performance of Japanese subsidiaries is measured using several dimensions and illustrates important recent trends. After each data set, the authors briefly discuss the information available, pointing the way for new research and more in-depth analysis. This book will be a vital source for international business researchers and corporate managers as well as government agencies and international organizations concerned with multinational enterprises, trade theory and business strategy, international economics, organizational behaviour and business history.

BOOK JACKET

The People Link Wendy Dobson, A. E. Safarian, University of Toronto. Centre for International Business, 1997. People Make Economies Grow. The People Link focuses on the characteristics of people and their respective organizations that contribute to integration and growth among the economies of the Asia Pacific region. Particular attention is paid to three people links that have spanned the Pacific: the ethnic Chinese networks, the contributions made to Canada by Asian immigrants, and the role of Asian immigrants as trade intermediaries in promoting trade between North America and Asia. All western managers must be familiar with the role of people organizations, especially the values and practices in family-owned businesses. To identify future business partners, Canadian firms must understand the strategies of people and organizations from other cultures and figure out how to work with them. The purpose of the Hongkong Bank of Canada Papers on Asia

series is to provide practical information in the form of timely and readable works to Canadian business and government decision makers that will help increase knowledge and familiarity with the distant markets of East Asia This interdisciplinary series establishes benchmarks against which Canada's future can be measured systematically Volume I Benchmarking the Canadian Business Presence in East Asia explained Canada's relatively modest business presence in the region and outlined the high costs of entering into these dynamic markets Volume II East Asian Capitalism Diversity and Dynamism examined these systems as one aspect of reducing such entry costs

Managing Subsidiary Dynamics Joseph L.C. Cheng, Elizabeth Maitland, Stephen Nicholas, 2009-07-03 Presents a multi disciplinary approach to researching subsidiary dynamics and its effective management with a focus on the role of the headquarters within the context of subsidiaries as members of a differentiated interdependent network and the development of subsidiary capabilities and their impact on firm performance

Strategic Business Alliances Keith W. Glaister, Rumi Husan, Peter J. Buckley, 2004 The book also explores the emerging issue of learning in strategic alliances as well as the sensitive question of cultural differences in the mix of factors that surround the complexities of modern international joint ventures Empirical evidence examined by the authors suggests that learning and cultural differences are vital elements in the operation and performance of these ventures
