aspects of their mechanics and igneous processes differ from those in other relatively well understood parts of the earth and there are few direct samples of some of their most important metamorphic and metasomatic processes As a result even first order features of subduction zones have generated conflict and apparent paradox A central question about convergent margins for instance how vigorous magmatism can occur where plates sink and the mantle cools has a host of mutually inconsistent answers Early suggestions that magmatism resulted from melting subducted crust have been emphatically disproved and recently just as emphatically revived the idea that melting is fluxed by fluid released from subducted crust is widely held but cannot explain the temperatures and volatile contents of many arc magmas generations of kinematic and dynamic models have told us the mantle sinks at convergent margins yet strong evidence suggests that melting there is often driven by upwelling In contrast our understanding of why volcanoes appear at ocean ridges and hotspots although still presenting their own chestnuts are fundamentally solved problems International ITG Conference Source and Channel Coding ,2004
