Constraints On Language Acquisition Studies Of Atypical Children:

Constraints on Language Acquisition Helen Tager-Flusberg, 2014-02-25 After decades of research most scholars generally agree that language acquisition is a complex and multifaceted process that involves the interaction of innate biologically based mechanisms devoted to language other non linguistic cognitive and social mechanisms linguistic input and information about the social and physical world Theoretical work in the field of language acquisition now needs to focus in greater depth and detail on some specific aspects of this general model which is the main goal of this book The chapters in this volume provide some new insights into one of the most remarkable accomplishments achieved by almost all children The particular questions that are raised by contributors include What kinds of constraints operate on the process of language development Which aspects of the acquisition process depend on language specific mechanisms Are there critical brain structures necessary for the acquisition of language What role do cognitive and social mechanisms play in language development How critical is perceptual input about the physical and social world What is the specific role played by linguistic input in the child s construction of a linguistic system Questions are addressed from the perspective of children who come to the task of acquiring language with many hurdles to overcome including deafness and blindness mental retardation autism and prenatal or perinatal brain damage involving the left hemisphere Each section contributes some insight on how an innate language specific biological substrate interacts with cognitive and social factors as well as external information to support the child s construction of a linguistic system Studies of atypical children offer a singular contribution to this enterprise by allowing us to see the specific influences of each component and in turn they shed new light on how all children are able to acquire language so effortlessly and during such a brief period of development

Constraints on Language Acquisition Helen Tager-Flusberg, 1994 Language Development and Social Interaction in Blind Children Miguel Perez Pereira, Gina Conti-Ramsden, 2019-12-09 The Classic Edition of this foundational text includes a new preface from Miguel P rez Pereira examining how the field has developed since first publication The volume provides an in depth account of blind children s developing communicative abilities with particular emphasis on social cognition and language acquisition from infancy to early school age It provides insights into why the development of blind children may differ from that of sighted children and explores development of theory of mind and perspective taking in language learning It also discusses the caregiver child interaction research on early intervention and practical strategies for blind children that can assist parents and practitioners The up to date preface discusses recent neurological research and the comparison between the psychological development of visually impaired and autistic children Language Development and Social Interaction in Blind Children continues to facilitate dialogue between those interested in the study of typically developing children and those interested in the development of children who are blind and challenges some widely held beliefs about the development of communication in blind children

The Resilience of Language Susan Goldin-Meadow, 2005-04-05 Imagine a child who has never seen or heard any language at all Would such a child be able to invent a language on her own Despite what one might guess the children described in this book make it clear that the answer to this question is yes The children are congenitally deaf and cannot learn the spoken language that surrounds them In addition they have not yet been exposed to sign language either by their hearing parents or their oral schools Nevertheless the children use their hands to communicate they gesture and those gestures take on many of the forms and functions of language The properties of language that we find in the deaf children s gestures are just those properties that do not need to be handed down from generation to generation but can be reinvented by a child de novo the resilient properties of language This book suggests that all children deaf or hearing come to language learning ready to develop precisely these language properties In this way studies of gesture creation in deaf children can show us the way that children themselves have a large hand in shaping how language is learned

Snowdon, Martine Hausberger, 1997-03-20 For at least 30 years there have been close parallels between studies of birdsong development and those of the development of human language Both song and language require species specific stimulation at a sensitive period in development and subsequent practice through subsong and plastic song in birds and babbling in infant humans leading to the development of characteristic vocalisations for each species This book illustrates how social interactions during development can shape vocal learning and extend the sensitive period beyond infancy and how social companions can induce flexibility even into adulthood Social companions in a wide range of species including birds and humans but also cetaceans and nonhuman primates play important roles in shaping vocal production as well as the comprehension and appropriate usage of vocal communication This book will be required reading for students and researchers interested in animal and human communication and its development The MIT Encyclopedia of Communication Disorders Raymond D.
