Consumption Population And Sustainability:

Consumption, Population, and Sustainability Audrey Chapman, Rodney L. Petersen, Barbara Smith-Moran, 2000 The combined contributions of science and religion to resolving environmental problems are far greater than each could offer working in isolation Scientific findings are central to understanding the impact of human populations on the environment but a more ecologically sustainable future will require radical changes in values lifestyle choices and consumption patterns a revolution that falls squarely within the domain of the religious community Consumption Population and Sustainability is an outgrowth of a conference sponsored jointly by the Boston Theological Institute and the American Association for the Advancement of Science that brought together more than 250 scientists and people of religious faith to discuss the environmental impact of consumption patterns and population trends and to consider alternative and more equitable value systems economic arrangements and technologies that will be necessary for achieving a more sustainable future The book provides a brief history of the dialogue between science and religion on environmental issues outlines potential contributions of the religious community to the debate about global sustainability offers a science based assessment of issues such as carrying capacity sustainability indicators and the environmental impacts of consumer based lifestyles considers religious and theological perspectives on consumption and population from a variety of viewpoints including Roman Catholic Jewish Greek Orthodox and Islamic examines the ethical and policy dimensions of reorienting today's consumer society to one more focused on values spiritual growth and relationships Both the scientific and religious communities can make important contributions to understanding and responding to the impact of population growth and consumption patterns on environmental sustainability This volume represents a significant step in establishing an ongoing dialogue between the communities and provides a thought provoking overview of the issues for scientists theologians and anyone concerned with the future of global sustainability

Human Population and the Environmental Crisis Ben Zuckerman, David Jefferson, 1996 Discusses environmental problems policies ethical and scientific concerns arising from the impact of overpopulation on our planet

Population & Sustainable Development Cairo Demographic Centre, 1999 Population and Sustainable Development United Nations Population Fund, 1997 This publication takes a look at population sustainable development five years after the United Nations Conference on Environment Development UNCED It discusses such areas as new visions persistent challenges population national environmental issues the linkage between population sustainable development locally nationally internationally

Pindyck, 2022 How does the sustainable level of consumption depend on productivity growth and the size and growth rate of the population What is the effect of uncertainty over these growth rates I address these questions using a model in which productivity and population growth are stochastic and social welfare allows for human lives to have positive or negative intrinsic value I show how the maximum sustainable consumption wealth ratio depends on expected rates of productivity and population growth the volatility of those growth rates and the extent to which welfare depends directly on the size of the population For plausible parameter values the sustainable consumption wealth ratio is well below the optimal ratio that maximizes welfare This raises a question Given its cost should sustainability be a social objective Sustainable Environment and Transportation Ming Jin Chu,Hui Zhong Xu,Zhi Lin Jia,Yun Fan,Jiang Ping Xu,2012-05-14 Selected peer reviewed papers from the 2nd International Conference on Civil Engineering Architecture and Building Materials CEABM 2012 May 25 27 2012 Yantai China Population and Environment Dynamics, Poverty and Quality of Life in Countries of the ESCAP Region United Nations.
