Conservation Of European Bats:

Action Plan for the Conservation of the Pond Bat in Europe (myotis Dasycneme) Council of Europe, 2000-01-01 This publication results from a request by the Standing Committee of the Bern Convention for action plans to be drawn up for the conservation of two bat species as a contribution to the Euro Species Programme The second action plan concerns the Greater Horseshoe bat Rhinolophus Ferrumquinum The pond bat is considered to be one of Europe's rarer and more threatened species Both roosts and foraging habitats are threatened The migratory behaviour of the species makes international collaboration an essential element of its conservation management This action plan gives detailed background to the current knowledge of the status and ecology of the pond bat and how this relates to threats to the species Country information is included in tables at the end of the text The plan includes detailed objectives points for further discussion and possible mechanisms for implementation of the action plan The Conservation of European Bats R. E. Stebbings, 1988 This book is the first of its kind to review complex conservation problems with the aim of producing practical conservation policies priorities and guidelines for the bats of Europe

Action Plan for the Conservation of the Greater Horseshoe Bat in Europe (Rhinolophus Ferrumequinum) Roger Ransome, Anthony Michael Hutson, Council of Europe, 2000-01-01 This publication results from a request by the Standing Committee of the Bern Convention for action plans to be drawn up for the conservation of two bat species as a contribution to the Euro Species Programme The second action plan concerns the Pond bat Myotis Dasycneme The greater horseshoe bat is widespread in Europe with major declines in its population recorded this century Both roosts and foraging habitats are threatened Action has been taken in many of the countries that this bat inhabits and this has at least stabilised populations Further conservation plans may vary between the current centres of population and areas of depleted or extinct populations This action plan gives detailed background to the current knowledge of the status and ecology of the pond bat and how this relates to threats to the species The plan includes detailed objectives points for further discussion and possible mechanisms for implementation of the action plan Bats of Britain and Europe Christian Dietz, Andreas Kiefer, 2016-02-25 The definitive guide to the bats of Britain and Europe This concise and definitive guide presents all 45 bat species that regularly occur in Europe of which 17 are known to breed in the British Isles The extensive introduction details the remarkable biology of bats and explores the latest findings in bat evolution behaviour and echolocation This is followed by in depth species accounts covering life history conservation status and identification of families and genera including echolocation characteristics and complemented by accurate distribution maps with the book illustrated throughout with almost 700 superb colour photographs Suitable for beginners students professionals or conservationists alike Bats of Britain and Europe is the authoritative field guide for bat watchers an essential reference for every bat enthusiast

Bat Conservation Management in Exploited European Temperate Forests

Laurent Tillon, 2018 Forests offer important refuge to bats by providing attractive roosting and foraging habitats. Their conservation is a major responsibility of forest managers. The use of tree cavities by bats in forests depends on the specific demands of each species with a large range of different types of microhabitats utilised from degraded cavities such as peeling bark to healthy hollows in live trees ensuring the temporal stability of the habitat. The conservation of tree dwelling bats should not be dissociated from their fission fusion behaviour which involves the use of many different roosts. Conservation measures must therefore take into account forest habitats suitable for feeding and in particular forest parameters such as structure composition vegetation and foliage among other elements such as deadwood all upon which the forest manager can intervene. Acting in favour of bats requires close consideration of their complex individual responses concerning roost selection and foraging habitat selection which is largely dictated by the reproductive status of individuals. Thereafter it is possible to evaluate the impact of wood harvesting on bats and to infer silvicultural conservation measures. The implementation of recommendations must then subsequently be based on a strong involvement on the part of the forest manager.

Bat Calls of Britain and Europe Jon Russ, 2021-08-23 A comprehensive guide to the calls of the 44 species of bat currently known to occur in Europe. Following on from the popular British Bat Calls by Jon Russ this new book draws on the expertise of more than forty specialist authors to substantially update all sections further expanding the volume to include sound analysis and species identification of all European bats. Aimed at volunteers and professional alike topics include the basics of sound echolocation in bats an introduction to acoustic communication equipment used and call analysis. For each species detailed information is given on distribution emergence flight and foraging behaviour habitat echolocation calls including parameters of common measurements and social calls. Calls are described for both heterodyne and time expansion full spectrum systems. A simple but complete echolocation guide to all species is provided for beginners allowing them to analyse call sequences and arrive at the most likely species or group. The book also includes access to a downloadable library of over 450 calls presented as sonograms in the species sections.

Bat Migrations in Europe Rainer Hutterer, 2005

Bats in the Anthropocene: Conservation of Bats in a Changing World Christian C. Voigt, Tigga Kingston, 2015-12-07 This book focuses on central themes related to the conservation of bats. It details their response to land use change and management practices intensified urbanization and roost disturbance and loss. Increasing interactions between humans and bats as a result of hunting disease relationships occupation of human dwellings and conflict over fruit crops are explored in depth. Finally contributors highlight the roles that taxonomy conservation networks and conservation psychology have to play in conserving this imperilled but vital taxon. With over 1300 species bats are the second largest order of mammals yet as the Anthropocene dawns bat populations around the world are in decline. Greater understanding of the anthropogenic drivers of this decline and exploration of possible mitigation measures are urgently needed if we are to retain global bat diversity in the coming decades This book brings together teams of international experts to provide a global review of current understanding and recommend directions for future research and mitigation Environmental Performance Reviews United Nations. Economic Commission for Europe, 2016 This series assists countries to improve their environmental policies by making concrete recommendations for better policy design and implementation It helps integrate environmental policies into sector specific policies such as those in agriculture energy transport and health The present publication contains the third Environmental Performance Review of Belarus It takes stock of progress made by Belarus in the management of its environment since the country was reviewed for the second time in 2005 It assesses the implementation of the recommendations made in the second review It also covers issues of specific importance to the country related to legal and policy frameworks the financing of environmental policies greening the economy and integrating environmental concerns into selected sectors in particular air protection water management waste management biodiversity forests and protected areas energy agriculture transport forestry tourism environmental education and education for sustainable development human settlements and health
