Agbo-Ejeh, 2024-12-31 The book offers an analysis of the contradictions between theory and practice in the trading system It contextualises the colonial legal structure and its impact on the peripheral countries and their participation and gain in the multilateral trading system The book's core argument effectively situates Economic Partnership Agreements in the systemic asymmetry which characterises the relationship between developed and developing countries in global trade It applies the idea of asymmetry to the relationship between the core countries the EU USA and the peripheral countries ACP in the GATT multilaterally and in the EU ACP trade relationship bilaterally The book identifies that core provisions in the WTO regime such as the special and differential treatment as well as GATT Article XXIV have not lived up to expectations Underscoring the asymmetrical participation and dominant role of former colonial powers the book demonstrates how although trade is generally considered a catalyst for economic growth developed countries have safeguarded their domestic markets while exerting pressure on developing countries to liberalise and compete The European Union has taken measures to address the development concerns of African Caribbean and Pacific countries through the Lom Conventions and Cotonou Agreement however these relationships still retain and reinforce colonial paternalism evidenced by recent trade agreements An alternative possibility multipolarity holds promise for African countries especially intra African trade and critical engagement with China The book is an invaluable resource for scholars postgraduate students government officials and policymakers as it offers a comprehensive

Drawing on recent theoretical developments in International Relations and Historical Sociology it is argued first that a distinction between constitutive and causal theory is necessary and second that this distinction makes comparisons at a high level of abstraction across time and space possible. The explanatory focus of Historical Realism is the political reproduction of states. States are seen as constantly facing a double security dilemma: it is being threatened or potentially threatened by two sets of rivals for revenue At the level of abstraction of Historical Realism states have two possible responses short of collapse to this double security dilemma They can either pursue a fortifying mode of political reproduction whereby the essence of their strategy is to prevent rivals from gaining strength Alternatively they can pursue an alliance building mode of political reproduction whereby they cooperate with or co opt rivals turning them into allies instead Which response states choose depend on the constitutive context they exist in and how this is changing The constitutive context is conceptualised with four dichotomous dimensions International systems it is argued can either be functionally differentiated or not and political relations in these systems can either be embedded in economic relations or not The societies from which states extract revenue can further either be competitive or not and either logistically closed or open The second part of the study develops this conceptual framework in the contexts of Japanese political reproduction towards the end of the nineteenth century the political reproduction and failure of the Roman Republic and political reproduction in early medieval western Europe
