Construction Of An Urban Past Narrative And System In Urban History:

The Construction of an Urban Past Harry Jansen, 2001-09 This book offers a new theoretical basis for urban studies and for historical studies in general by addressing one of the main problems that confronts contemporary historians How is it possible to process and synthesize an increasingly overwhelming amount of specialist research in the face of the theoretical deadlock caused by postmodernism How can we move beyond its claim that the past is unknowable Jansen's approach in which he claims there is a reality that is accessible to our cognitive capacities is based on Systems Theory which has already been applied so successfully in the fields of management and organization While focusing his attention on urban historiography Jansen argues that an integrative systems approach can be used in any field of historical enquiry to create a meaningful picture of the past He illustrates the importance of structuring data in this way by looking at the profound complexity of the urban environment This book is therefore important reading not only for urban historians and geographers but also for all social scientists interested in the future study of the European city space in Science Fiction cinema is also a space that the audience is invited and allowed to travel through to participate to partake in The audience finds their way through the space and therefore are forced to relate and identify with the space created by the architecture during the viewing of the film This identification process by the audience is central to a proper and legitimate understanding of the film In this dissertation I have chosen to analyse three films all of them Science Fiction My reason for choosing them was that I was intent upon finding some of the most interesting thought provoking and effective ways architecture has been used to activate a response within viewers of film a response which is entirely justifiable and extends to an unquestionable belief in the validity of the story taking place on the screen All three of the films chosen within this study raise specific issues in relation to the significance of architectural space and form in Science Fiction cinema
