The consulting profession in developing countries : a strategy for development Syed S. Kirmani, Warren C. Baum, 1991 The authors concluded that during the past two decades the number of domestic consulting firms in developing countries has increased phenomenally However the quality of their performance has not kept pace with the growth in numbers The policies and practices of government internal weaknesses in staffing and management and the lack of a supportive environment have prevented domestic consulting firms from effectively exercising the key role that they should in planning designing and implementing their countries investment programs The authors also point out that favorable opportunities for growth of the consulting profession exist but a number of constraints will have to be overcome for those to be realized The profession generally suffers from several structural weaknesses It is characterized by a small number of large firms mostly public enterprises which dominate the business and at the other end of the scale a very large number of small or medium size private firms often in a precarious position The recommended strategy for strengthening the domestic consulting is addressed to both the developing countries and the World Bank and other donors

New Perspectives on Construction in Developing Countries George Ofori, 2012-06-26 Developing countries face the challenge of maintaining economic growth and socio economic development at the core of which sits the construction industry Considerable research on construction in developing countries took place in the 1970 s and 1980 s but little since a gap which this book fills Including contributions from prominent academics and practitioners in Australia China the Netherlands Portugal Singapore South Africa Switzerland and the UK this is a truly international analysis of a subject of global interest The most insightful and relevant of recent research on topics such as Millennium Development Goals the informal construction sector human resource development technology finance and social change are all addressed in the context of the construction industry in the developing world Also considered are other key aspects of construction industry development such as institution building nurturing of contractors and consultants and championing of industry development programmes While the challenge has grown and the needs have become even more pressing the research to date has rarely presented effective solutions Focussing on those aspects of the construction industry most crucial to development this is a much needed up to date study that sheds new light on a variety of concepts and issues This is essential reading for researchers professionals and students interested in the construction industry in developing countries Readers of this book will be interested in its companion volume Contemporary Issues of Construction in Developing Countries
