Consumer Lending:

Consumer Finance Irving S. Michelman, 1970      Consumer Lending Paul Beares, 1997      Consumer Lending in France and America Gunnar Trumbull, 2014-08-11 At the beginning of the 20th century consumer credit in the United States was perceived as unfair and exploitative Social reformers fought to limit the economic and social impact of small lenders they decried as loan sharks Reputable businesses steered clear of sales credit because of the questionable consumers that it would attract By the 1970s however credit in America had been reimagined as a legitimate tool of household finance that was understood to have broad social and economic benefits This transformation in the moral economy of credit accompanied a revolution in lending technologies and the regulatory treatment of consumer credit Ultimately these changes allowed American households to amass unprecedented debt debt that eventually precipitated the worst financial crisis of postwar America To understand the origins of that crisis we need to understand not just the shifting habits of consumers but also what happened to lenders as the public moved from opposing credit to embracing it This book traces how that transformation occurred Nearly all accounts of the origins of American consumer credit have focused exclusively on the U S experience Single country case studies have their virtues But they do not allow the observer easily to differentiate what is unusual about the U S case from what is common even to countries with very different credit practices      Consumer Credit in the United States United States. National Commission on Consumer Finance, 1972      Consumer Lending Richard E. Beck, Susan M. Siegel, 2001 This text introduces students who are new to US consumer lending principles and practice to the lending process its importance to the bank and to consumers and the environment in which it functions It takes a practical approach and presents a conceptual overview of the fundamentals of lending along with contemporary issues such as technology regulation and attitudes It also details developments important to an understanding of consumer lending today      Handbook of Consumer Finance Research Jing J. Xiao, 2008-01-03 Debt consolidation pension givebacks Social Security under siege bankruptcies and foreclosures Americans financial lives are fraught with issues challenges and potential threats in record numbers The Handbook of Consumer Finance Research surveys the social aspects of consumer behavior offering latest data and original research on current consumer needs as well as identifying emerging areas of research This accessible volume which can be read without advanced training in the field starts with current concepts of risk tolerance consumer socialization and financial well being and moves on to salient data on specific settings and populations including Healthcare spending and retirement savings Online shopping and e banking Family finances marriage parent child communications student spending Financial concerns of special groups minorities seniors the poor Management issues of business owning families Consumer protection in fair lending Given the current climate of rising debt and negative savings the Handbook is timely and instructive reading for educators researchers and policymakers who wish to develop or evaluate financial education programs design research initiatives and understand better how to help families with the economic problems of our times It investment choices that households make over time. These financial decisions can be complex and can affect households' financial wellbeing both now and in the future. Safe and affordable financial services are an important tool for most American households to avoid financial hardship, build assets, and achieve financial security over the course of their lives. Understanding why and how consumers make financial decisions is important when considering policy issues in consumer financial markets. Households borrow money for the following common reasons: investments such as a home or education to build future wealth; consumption smoothing, i.e., paying later to consume things now; and emergency expenses. Most households rely on credit to finance some of these expenses because they do not have enough money saved to pay for them. According to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, mortgage debt is by far the largest type of debt for households, accounting for approximately 67% of household debt. Student debt is the second largest household debt, followed by auto loans and credit cards. Consumer financial markets generally share similar market dynamics. In all of these markets, consumers often act in similar ways when making financial decisions, and firms tend to act in comparable ways to attract consumers. Therefore, the government tends to consider similar policy interventions when regulating in these markets. Competitive free markets generally lead to efficient distributions of goods and services to maximize value for society. Yet sometimes free markets are inefficient when particular issues arise. Common issues in consumer financial markets include 1) information asymmetries between financial firms and consumers, and 2) behavioral biases that predictably bias consumers when making financial decisions. In these cases, government policy can potentially correct market failures to bring the market to a more efficient outcome, maximizing social welfare. In consumer finance, three types of policy interventions are common: 1) standardized consumer disclosures, 2) regulation to prevent deceptive, unfair, or abusive financial institution practices, and 3) regulation to prevent discrimination in consumer lending markets. Yet policymakers need to be aware of unintended consequences of proposed policies and often find it challenging to determine whether a policy intervention will help or harm a particular market's efficiency. In response to the 2007-2009 financial crisis, the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act (Dodd-Frank P.L. 111-203) established the Bureau of Consumer Financial Protection (CFPB) to implement and enforce federal consumer financial law while ensuring consumers can access financial products and services. The CFPB's authorities fall into three broad categories: rulemaking (writing regulations to implement laws under its jurisdiction), supervision (the power to examine and impose reporting requirements on financial institutions), and enforcement of various consumer protection laws and regulations. The CFPB generally has regulatory authority over providers of an array of consumer financial products and services. The major consumer financial markets include mortgage lending, student loans, automobile loans, credit cards, and payments (payday loans and other credit alternatives), financial products, and checking accounts and substitutes. In addition, two important market structures allow these consumer financial products to be offered: 1) the consumer credit reporting system, and 2) the debt collection market. These aspects of the consumer credit system facilitate the pricing of credit offers and the resolution of delinquent consumer credit products for most consumer credit markets      Journal - Federal Home Loan Bank Board
