Consumption And Identity At Work

Frank Webster, Basil Dimitriou

Consumption And Identity At Work:

Consumption and Identity at Work Paul du Gay, 1995-11-28 The realms of consumption have typically been seen to be distinct from those of work and production This book examines how contemporary rhetorics and discourses of organizational change are breaking down such distinctions with significant implications for the construction of subjectivities and identities at work In particular Paul du Gay shows how the capacities and predispositions required of consumers and those required of employees are increasingly difficult to distinguish Both consumers and employees are represented as autonomous responsible calculating individuals They are constituted as such in the language of consumer cultures and the all pervasive discourses of enterprise whereby persons are required to be entrepreneurs of the self at work at play and in all aspects of their lives The first part of the book explores certain limitations in traditional approaches to the analysis of work identity It presents an alternative discursive framework in which to address contemporary re imaginings of organizational life within the culture of the consumer Part Two develops the analysis by looking at an arena where the blurring of the boundaries between work and consumption identities is most pronounced retailing The author builds a sophisticated picture of how discourses of reform take hold in particular contexts how they construct particular subject positions for employees to occupy and how employees negotiate these identities in their everyday working lives He concludes by considering the ethical and other issues of setting limits to enterprise

Consumption and Identity Jonathan Friedman, 2005-06-28 First published in 2004 Studies in Anthropology and History is a series that will develop new theoretical perspectives and combine comparative and ethnographic studies with historical research Volume fifteen and this is about the relation between consumption and broader cultural strategies The papers are the product of a workshop organized in Denmark under the aegis of the Center for Research in the Humanities which took place in 1989 While the majority of participants were anthropologists there were also sociologists and historians present

Consumption as Identity Antonio Carlos, 2025-09-02 In contemporary society consumption has become the total grammar of existence In a world where goods not only meet needs but also shape identities reflecting on consumption and identity has become an urgent matter This work explores how consumer choices define not only what we own but also who we are while commodities take on the role of symbol and power leading individuals to see themselves as an extension of the objects they acquire Over the course of 40 philosophical fragments this book reveals consumption as the mirror of modern identity where desire loneliness and the search for recognition intertwine with what is consumed Through deep and critical analysis the author explores themes like the commercialization of spirituality the fetishism of commodities the spectacle of suffering and identity discard offering a reflection on the paradoxes of contemporary life The quest for belonging authenticity and meaning increasingly mediated by purchase and display raises questions about the authenticity of human experience and true freedom of choice This work challenges the reader to reflect on consumption as performance commodities as subjects and the impact of the market on the construction of human identity Consumer Culture and the Making of Modern Jewish Identity Gideon Reuveni, 2017-08-07 Antisemitic stereotypes of Jews as capitalists have hindered research into the economic dimension of the Jewish past The figure of the Jew as trader and financier dominated the nineteenth and twentieth centuries But the economy has been central to Jewish life and the Jewish image in the world Jews not only made money but spent money This book is the first to investigate the intersection between consumption identity and Jewish history in Europe It aims to examine the role and place of consumption within Jewish society and the ways consumerism generated and reinforced Jewish notions of belonging from the end of the eighteenth century to the beginning of the new millennium It shows how the advances of modernization and secularization in the modern period increased the importance of consumption in Jewish life making it a significant factor in the process of redefining Jewish identity Studies, 1988 Consumerism and the Movement of Housewives into Wage Work David R.
