

COMMUNITY PARTICIPATION IN PRIMARY HEALTH CARE

Somnath Roy* and B.B.L. Sharma**

ABSTRACT

Active community participation is one of the most important supportive activities for successful implementation of primary health care for achieving the goals of Health for All by the Year 2000 AD. In this paper, the nature, the various aspects and dimensions of community participation, and its role and scope in successful implementation of different components of primary health care have been described. The concepts and general principles as evolved from a wide range of experiences available from within and outside the country have been systematically analyzed and organized. The steps needed for operationalizing community participatory processes have been indicated. Some of the successful experiences in involving the community participation in the country have also been briefly presented to bring out the lessons learnt from them. It is sincerely hoped that this document will be useful to the health personnel at different levels and others concerned in this field for proper understanding and practical application of dynamic community participatory processes for successful implementation of primary health care.

INTRODUCTION

According to the national goal, a minimum level of health that would permit every citizen to lead an economically productive and socially useful life is to be achieved by 2000 AD through primary health care approach. For this purpose at least eight essential components of primary health care are to be implemented. These are: (1) Education of the people about prevailing health problems and the methods of preventing and controlling them; (2) Promotion of food supply and proper nutrition; (3) Adequate supply of safe water and basic sanitation; (4) Maternal and child health care and family planning; (5) Immunization against major infectious diseases; (6) Prevention and control of locally endemic diseases; (7) Appropriate treatment of common diseases and injuries; and (8) Provision of essential drugs. For successful implementation of these components, organization of the following eight
