Abstract

Community psychology has historically focused on understanding individual behavior in sociocultural context, assessing high-impact contexts, and working in and with communities to improve their resources and influence over their futures. This review adopts an ecological perspective on recent developments in the field, beginning with philosophy of science and progressing through a series of substantive research and intervention domains that characterize current work. These domains include research on the ecology of lives, the assessment of social settings and their impact on behavior, culture and diversity as expressed in the community research process, and community intervention.

The Changing HIV/AIDS Landscape Elizabeth Lule, Richard Seifman, Antonio C. David, 2009-01-01 HIV/AIDS reverses life expectancy gains erodes productivity consumes savings and dilutes growth efforts threatening the realization of the Millennium Development Goals MDGs in Africa The report is the result of an extensive analytical and consultative process begun in 2006 that engaged more than 1 000 people from over 30 countries and many institutions mostly in Africa as well as UN agencies multilateral and bilateral donors and foundations The report reaffirms the Bank's commitment to combating HIV/AIDS in Africa moving from its initial emergency response to the next phase including the goal to provide at least US 250 million annually and to create an Africa HIV/AIDS Incentive Fund to enhance the evidence base promote the multisectoral response and provide technical support analysis and policy advice to countries

Handbook of Methods in Cultural Anthropology H. Russell Bernard, Clarence C. Gravlee, 2014-07-08 The Handbook of Methods in Cultural Anthropology now in its second edition maintains a strong benchmark for understanding the scope of contemporary anthropological field methods Avoiding divisive debates over science and humanism the contributors draw upon both traditions to explore fieldwork in practice The second edition also reflects major developments of the past decade including the rising prominence of mixed methods the emergence of new technologies and evolving views on ethnographic writing Spanning the chain of research from designing a project through methods of data collection and interpretive analysis the Handbook features new chapters on ethnography of online communities social survey research and network and geospatial analysis Considered discussion of ethics epistemology and the presentation of research results to diverse audiences round out the volume The result is an essential guide for all scholars professionals and advanced students who employ fieldwork

Community Health Workers: Describing the Breadth of Interventions and Contexts Across the World Mathieu Nacher, Nicolas Vignier, 2025-05-15

Social inequalities in health remain a challenging problem throughout the world Despite a variety of specific contexts vulnerable populations often present to care later with more advanced health problems and often greater fatality rates at younger ages To remediate this health services NGOs project personnel to liaise with the communities and serve as an intermediary between health professionals and patients from vulnerable populations The denominations may vary health mediation cultural mediation community health workers Agente de Sa de and sometimes entail different functions Hard evidence on the impact of these mediators is often lacking because of the differences in contexts specific health problems considered and what mediation entails in different countries In this Research Topic we encourage submissions of articles that describe a range of experiences for different contexts where mediation health mediation cultural mediation community health workers Agente de Sa de programmes are deployed for public health issues From this variety of experiences we hope this special issue will constitute a precious repository of experiences and contexts that could be transferable and scalable interventions for others

HIV Prevention Planning Council,1998 The Uncharted Path from Clinic-based to Community-based Research Bonita Stanton,Jennifer Galbraith,Linda Kaljee,2008 Community based health related research requires a reciprocal relationship between researchers and communities that differs from the relationships established in clinic based health related research In the former not only is there a direct relationship with the individual as there is in clinic based research but an equally important and constantly changing relationship with the community Also in community based research relationships change from that in which individuals are subjects of research to the same individuals as participants or partners in the research process These academic community relationships are especially complex because frequently the community does not speak with a single voice and may have multiple different constituencies and perspectives In addition research teams comprised of several disciplines may be perceived as coming from unique academic communities which of themselves may have different ways of envisioning community based research There is a recent call for more transdisciplinary research and yet there are limited empirical studies available which critically examine how disciplines work separately and in tangent to affect community based research This book will be used both by researchers and by those teaching upper graduate level and graduate level health education HIV/AIDS Peter J. Evidence-based Decisionmaking for Community Health Programs Catherine A. Jackson, Raynard Kington, 1998 With the increase in information derived from clinical research and technology many in clinical medicine have adopted an evidence based approach to inform treatment decisionmaking Such a process forces the physician to obtain relevant scientific information evidence from a variety of sources including the patient and to evaluate continually decisions made against patient health outcomes Among the various proposed community based health programs how do foundations or health care systems decide which programs to fund Can the evidence based decisionmaking paradigm adopted by the clinical community support decisionmaking concerning community based health programs A literature review was conducted to ascertain what types of evidence concerning community based health program effectiveness and costs were available Focus groups and telephone interviews were conducted with persons involved in community based health program funding decisions to learn how decisions were made and what types of information were used to support those decisions While there was general support for using more evidence regarding program effectiveness and costs in making funding decisions about community based programs there was consensus that little evidence was readily available There was also a widely held belief that funding decisions could and should also take into consideration issues beyond that which can be expressed as evidence The report concludes with some suggestions regarding how health care systems and private funders can move toward an evidence based approach to community based program decisionmaking

Planning of District HIV/AIDS Programmes Japheth Ng'weshemi, 2000 For the whole of Tanzania the HIV AIDS epidemic is a very large problem that affecting all layers of society Not only do illnesses and deaths due to AIDS have far reaching effects on families communities and institutions prevention of HIV infection also requires that joint efforts be made by all sectors organizations and communities in a district If money time and manpower are not invested in reducing HIV infection now much more money time and manpower will need to be allocated to dealing with the consequences in the near future This publication is intended to serve as a resource for districts that face the challenge of incorporating HIV AIDS programs into their district plans For this purpose it describes thirteen possible components of a district HIV AIDS program the resources needed to implement them and their estimated costs The approach described in this book is based on experience gained by the TANESA project in developing district HIV AIDS programs in collaboration with government and NGO staff from Magu and Mwanza Districts in Mwanza Region Tanzania
