Perspective Taking: building a neurocognitive framework for integrating the “social” and the “spatial” Klaus Kessler, Sarah H Creem-Regehr, Antonia Hamilton, 2015-06-08

Background Interacting with other people involves spatial awareness of one's own body and the other's body and viewpoint. In the past, social cognition has focused largely on belief reasoning which is abstracted away from spatial and bodily representations while there is a strong tradition of work on spatial and object representation which does not consider social interactions. These two domains have flourished independently. A small but growing body of research examines how awareness of space and body relates to the ability to interpret and interact with others. This also builds on the growing awareness that many cognitive processes are embodied which could be of relevance for the integration of the social and spatial domains. Online mental transformations of spatial representations have been shown to rely on simulated body movements and various aspects of social interaction have been related to the simulation of a conspecific's behaviour within the observer's bodily repertoire. Both dimensions of embodied transformations or mappings seem to serve the purpose of establishing alignment between the observer and a target. In spatial cognition research, the target is spatially defined as a particular viewpoint or frame of reference. For yet in social interaction research, another viewpoint is occupied by another's mind which crucially requires perspective taking in the sense of considering what another person experiences from a different viewpoint. Perspective taking has been studied in different ways within developmental psychology, cognitive psychology, psycholinguistics, neuropsychology and cognitive neuroscience over the last few decades yet integrative approaches for channelling all information into a unified account of perspective taking and viewpoint transformations have not been presented so far.

Aims This Research Topic aims to bring together the social and the spatial and to highlight findings and methods which can unify research across areas. In particular, the topic aims to advance our current theories and set the stage for future developments of the field by clarifying and linking theoretical concepts across disciplines.

Scope The focus of this Research Topic is on the SPATIAL and the SOCIAL and we anticipate that all submissions will touch on both aspects and will explicitly attempt to bridge conceptual gaps. Social questions could include questions of how people judge another person's viewpoint or spatial capacities or how they imagine themselves from different points of view. Spatial questions could include consideration of different physical configurations of the body and the arrangement of different viewpoints including mental rotation of objects or viewpoints that have social relevance. Questions could also relate to how individual differences in personality, sex, development, culture, species, etc. influence or determine social and spatial perspective judgements. Many different methods can be used to explore perspective taking including mental chronometry, behavioural tasks, EEG, MEG and fMRI, child development, neuropsychological patients, virtual reality and more. Bringing together results and approaches from these different domains is a key aim of this Research Topic. We welcome submissions of experimental papers, reviews and theory papers which cover these topics Cognitive Development in English Language Teaching Rajesh Lane, The Development of Social Cognition and Communication Bruce D. Homer, Catherine S. Tamis-LeMonda, 2013-12-02 For young children two of the most important tasks they face are learning how to communicate and learning how to think about themselves and the social world around them The premise of this book is that these two tasks are inherently linked The communicative routines and language that children learn enable new modes of cognition which in turn allow for more complex social interactions The model of early child development that emerges is one in which equal importance is given to the socio cultural context in which children are developing and to the role played by children in actively constructing their own knowledge The book is organized into four thematic sections each introduced by an integrative overview The first section Language and Cognition examines the function of language in young children s lives The second section Intentionality and Communication explores young children s understanding of intentions and their verbal and non verbal communication The third section Theory of Mind and Pedagogy examines the ways in which developments in cognitive and communicative skills transform children s participation in the process of teaching and learning The final section Narrative and Autobiographical Memory looks at the effects of narrative on young children s understanding of themselves and their world This book will be of great interest to anyone concerned with young children s learning and development Communication - eBook Gjyn O'Toole, 2020-04-10 Written by Gjyn O Toole Communication Core Interpersonal Skills for Healthcare Professionals 4e is an essential guide to clear and effective communication in a multidisciplinary healthcare setting Divided into four sections the fourth edition challenges the reader to reflect upon their personal communication style and habits introduces strategies and skills to enhance future practice and encourages the development of confidence through activities scenarios and case studies This fully revised fourth edition will appeal to health science students and clinicians seeking to communicate more effectively in an increasingly complex healthcare environment Increased focus on digital communication includes overviews and tips on navigating professional and personal electronic media Individual and group activities throughout to encourage skill development reflection and awareness of self and others An extensive suite of scenarios practice and apply your communication skills using realistic situations and individuals that healthcare professionals encounter in clinical practice Chapter 5 The specific goals of communication for healthcare professionals Effective conclusions of interactions and services Negotiating closure Chapter 20 Remote telecommunication or telehealth The seen but not in the room healthcare professional Chapter 23 Person s experiencing neurogenic or psychological shock Chapter 25 A Person s fulfilling the role of a grandparent Chapter 26 Person s with a spinal injury Chapter 27 A Person s living in a residential aged care facility An eBook included in all print purchases Communicative, Cognitive, and Social Development in Autistic Children Amy Miller Wetherby, 1982 Communication in Paramedic Practice Gjyn O'Toole, 2023-10-01 The ability to communicate well is the single most important skill for a paramedic But despite an
