Police-community Relations Alan Coffey, Edward Eldefonso, Walter Hartinger, 1971 The purpose of this text is to provide a resource for training police officers in the complexity of community and human relations The text recognizes that law enforcement is faced with the need to develop line officers who are capable of not only enforcing the law but also of participating in the resolution of social problems associated with crime The text approaches social problems from the point of view that police are primarily responsible for enforcing law and only indirectly responsible for the resolution of social problems The authors acknowledge the importance of strengthening police community relationships Such relationships have a direct bearing on the character of life in cities and on a community's ability to maintain stability and solve its problems At the same time a police department's ability to deal with crime depends to a large extent upon its relation with citizens Since a community's attitude toward the police is influenced by the actions of individual officers courteous and tolerant behavior by police officers in their contacts with citizens is essential If law enforcement programs ignore the conditions that motivate the behavior of minority groups especially in cities police officers will continue to act in ways that invite hostility anger and violence The text discusses the effect of social problems on law enforcement equal justice for minority groups social change and community tension implications of group behavior for law enforcement the link between attitudes and prejudices and the police and community and human relations References charts and figures Authorization Requests of the Community Relations Service at the Department of Justice United States. Police, Criminal Justice, and the Community Alan Edward Bent, Ralph A. Rossum, 1976 This book focuses on the relations of the community not only with the police but also with the other components of the criminal justice system and advances a theoretical and practical justification for police community relations The book was written as a primary textbook for college students in courses on police community relations In addition to its focus on the entire criminal justice system and its sustained justification of police community relations on the basis of the political principles of majority rule and minority rights this book also emphasizes the need for political and social realism It stresses that police community relations are in fact two way communication and that even when the police and courts and corrections as well fully appreciate the need for improved relations with the community all of their insights and efforts may well be for naught if there is not a reciprocal and equal response and commitment to police community relations on the part of the community
