Community Writing Researching Social Issues Through Composition:

Community Writing Paul S. Collins, 2001-02-01 Community Writing Researching Social Issues Through Composition employs a series of assignments that guide students to research and write about issues confronting their individual communities. Students start by identifying a community to which they belong and focusing on problems in it and then analyze possible solutions, construct arguments for them, decide which are likely to succeed and consider how to initiate action. This is a primary text for first year composition courses covering the basics of the writing process. The assignments are recursive. Short writing assignments in each chapter build up to longer papers. Each of the assignment questions is accompanied by a guide to thinking about and writing the assigned paper followed by a short Focus On reading that provides a brief account of community activism, a media case study or a notable success story. The longer papers are accompanied by in-class peer reading groups. Each successive peer reading attempt is a higher level of conceptual critique. By working together throughout the semester, students create increasingly adept peer groups familiar with all stages of each other's research. The book is carefully structured but there is plenty of give in it, allowing instructors to be flexible in adapting it to the needs of their students and courses. Community Writing is distinguished by pedagogy based on a collaborative process-oriented service learning approach that emphasizes media critique and field research on community issues chosen by individual students. It answers real student questions such as: Where do I find articles on my topic? What if evidence contradicts my hypothesis? How do I know if a source is biased? Is web savvy guides students into building their own Web sites including a unique guide for critiquing the design and veracity of other people's websites and is media savvy. Topics include media monopolies, spin control, dumbing down, misleading statistics, the Freedom of Information Act, crackpot authors, political rhetoric and fallacious argumentation.

Community Literacy and the Rhetoric of Local Publics Elenore Long, 2008-03-22 Offering a comparative analysis of community literacy studies, Community Literacy and the Rhetoric of Local Publics traces common values in diverse accounts of ordinary people going public. Elenore Long offers a five-point theoretical framework. Used to review major community literacy projects that have emerged in recent years, this local public framework uncovers profound differences with significant consequence within five formative perspectives: 1 the guiding metaphor behind such projects, 2 the context that defines a local public, shaping what is an effective even possible performance, 3 the tenor and affective register of the discourse, 4 the literate practices that shape the discourse and most significantly, 5 the nature of rhetorical invention or the generative process by which people in these accounts respond to exigencies such as getting around gatekeepers, affirming identities and speaking out with others across difference.

Ethnography Unbound Stephen Gilbert Brown, Sidney I. Dobrin, 2012-02-01 These provocative new essays redefine the goals, methods and assumptions of qualitative and ethnographic research in composition studies, making evident not only the crucial importance of ethnographic research but also its resilience. As Ethnography Unbound makes evident, critical ethnographers are retheorizing their methodologies in ways that both redefine ethnographic practices and values and at the same time have begun to liberate ethnographic practices from the often disabling stronghold of postmodern critique Showing how ethnography works through dialogic processes and moves toward political ends this collection opens the doors to rethinking ethnographic research in composition studies
