Cost Of Being Poor Poverty Lead Poisoning And Policy Implementation:

The Cost of Being Poor Jeanita Richardson, 2005-09-30 Social problems such as childhood lead poisoning do not occur in a vacuum. As such, the definition of the problem requires a holistic examination of the broad social, political, and economic influences that create and perpetuate the issue of concern. Richardson does this with eloquence and heart. She also investigates the attitudes various groups have held toward the Residential Lead-based Paint Hazard Reduction Act Title X. In doing so, she reveals much about the attitudes officials hold in general toward problems affecting poor communities and demonstrates how these attitudes directly affect policymaking and policy enforcement. The social consequences of lead poisoning analyzed in this volume fall into the following categories: Housing, Health, Education, Policy making, Legal Challenges. The Cost of Being Poor would be useful to individuals in the fields of public health, policy, education, and law. Furthermore, this work would be of special use to educators who would benefit from familiarity with lead poisoning as a factor in their students' lives and from becoming aware that there are options that poisoned children have to improve their situation. The first step necessary in eliminating social problems is to understand the nature of the problem. This study is a step in that direction.

The Limits of Knowledge Nancy Arden McHugh, 2015-07-16 The Limits of Knowledge provides an understanding of what pragmatist feminist theories look like in practice, combining insights from the work of American pragmatist John Dewey concerning experimental inquiry and transaction with arguments for situated knowledge rooted in contemporary feminism. Using case studies to demonstrate some of the particular ways that dominant scientific and medical practices fail to meet the health needs of marginalized groups and communities, Nancy Arden McHugh shows how transactionally situated approaches are better able to meet the needs of these communities. Examples include a community action group fighting environmental injustice in Bayview Hunters Point, California, one of the most toxic communities in the US; gender, race, age, and class biases in the study and diagnosis of endometriosis; a critique of Evidence-Based Medicine; the current effects of Agent Orange on Vietnamese women and children; and pediatric treatment of Amish and Mennonite children.

The Full-Service Community School Movement J. Richardson, 2009-11-23 This book contributes in multiple dimensions to the educational literature through an articulation of T. J. and Anita Anderson's vision, how the community and faculty adopted the vision, what it meant in practical terms to matriculating students and their families, and espouses lessons applicable in the 21st Century.

Epidemiology and the People's Health Nancy Krieger, 2011-03-23 This concise, conceptually rich, and accessible book is a rallying cry for a return to the study and discussion of epidemiologic theory, what it is, why it matters, how it has changed over time, and its implications for improving population health and promoting health equity. By tracing its history and contours from ancient societies on through the development of and debates within contemporary epidemiology worldwide, Dr. Krieger shows how epidemiologic theory has long shaped epidemiologic practice, knowledge, and the politics of public health.
