Accelerating Data Transformation with IBM DB2 Analytics Accelerator for z/OS Ute Baumbach, Patric Becker, Uwe Denneler, Eberhard Hechler, Wolfgang Hengstler, Steffen Knoll, Frank Neumann, Guenter Georg Schoellmann, Khadija Souissi, Timm Zimmermann, IBM Redbooks, 2015-12-11 Transforming data from operational data models to purpose oriented data structures has been commonplace for the last decades Data transformations are heavily used in all types of industries to provide information to various users at different levels Depending on individual needs the transformed data is stored in various different systems Sending operational data to other systems for further processing is then required and introduces much complexity to an existing information technology IT infrastructure Although maintenance of additional hardware and software is one component potential inconsistencies and individually managed refresh cycles are others For decades there was no simple and efficient way to perform data transformations on the source system of operational data With IBM DB2 Analytics Accelerator DB2 for z OS is now in a unique position to complete these transformations in an efficient and well performing way DB2 for z OS completes these while connecting to the same platform as for operational transactions helping you to minimize your efforts to manage existing IT infrastructure Real time analytics on incoming operational transactions is another demand Creating a comprehensive scoring model to detect specific patterns inside your data can easily require multiple iterations and multiple hours to complete By enabling a first set of analytical functionality in DB2 Analytics Accelerator those dedicated mining algorithms can now be run on an accelerator to efficiently perform these modeling tasks Given the speed of query processing on an accelerator these modeling tasks can now be performed much quicker compared to traditional relational database management systems This speed enables you to keep your scoring algorithms more up to date and ultimately adapt more quickly to constantly changing customer behaviors This IBM Redbooks publication describes the new table type that is introduced with DB2 Analytics Accelerator V4 1 PTF5 that enables more efficient data transformations These tables are called accelerator only tables and can exist on an accelerator only The tables benefit from the accelerator performance characteristics while maintaining access through existing DB2 for z OS application programming interfaces APIs Additionally we describe the newly introduced analytical capabilities with DB2 Analytics Accelerator V5 1 putting you in the position to efficiently perform data modeling for online analytical requirements in your DB2 for z OS environment This book is intended for technical decision makers who want to get a broad understanding about the analytical capabilities and accelerator only tables of DB2 Analytics Accelerator In addition you learn about how these capabilities can be used to accelerate in database transformations and in database analytics in various environments and scenarios including the following scenarios Multi step processing and reporting in IBM DB2 Query Management Facility™ IBM Campaign or Microstrategy environments In database transformations using IBM InfoSphere DataStage Ad hoc data analysis for data scientists In database analytics using IBM SPSS Modeler

Cost Reduction in Vertically Related Industries

Herman Quirmbach, Rand Corporation, 1983 A continuing concern in the study of vertical integration is whether ownership integration is necessary or sufficient to achieve all possible cost savings in the operation of a vertically related sequence of production processes Integration or any other mechanism for controlling intermediate markets must accomplish two functions to coordinate production and to divide revenues among the various levels The analysis here compares integration and several other revenue division mechanisms in terms of the production efficiency they induce The intermediate market control mechanisms compared are simple linear pricing two forms of nonlinear pricing a royalty scheme and a two part tariff and vertical integration Under a royalty scheme the purchaser of an intermediate good pays a price per unit of intermediate good brought plus a royalty fee for each unit of final good produced Under a two part tariff the intermediate good buyer pays a lump sum access charge in addition to the per unit price Cost reduction serves the monopolist interests whether his goal is to maximize profits or welfare Pricing the intermediate good at marginal cost may either not be feasible e g because of a need to cover the costs of an increasing returns upstream production process or may not be desirable e g under profit maximization Cost savings at a constant final output level are sufficient for profit or welfare gains Cost Reduction from A to Z Lindley R.
