

PHILOSOPHY of COUNSELING

Clinical psychology focus SE on the intellectual, emotional, biological, psychological, social, and behavioral aspects of human injunction across the life span, in varying cultures, and at all socioeconomic level" (Todd & Aboard, 1999, pag. 5). In my philosophy I do believe this to be true among other things, I believe the Bible to be my main source of truth. View of Human Nature With any philosophy we have to start at the beginning of the nature of people and their disorders. Why are people the way they are? Is it nature or nurture?

I believe we do not start out as a "blank slate." We are all born with specific genes and attributes that are unique to us. We are all individuals unique in our own ways. However our experiences mature and shape us for good or for bad. Think about life as a poker game and in your hand are the cards you have been dealt. You were given the cards and how you play the game or your "experiences" will determine the outcome. Morality and values are not subjective sets of ideas that vary from person to person, or even culture to culture.

Rather, they are determined by Someone who is above the created realm and gives them to all whom are created. This "Someone" gives you the cards. Without being given these basic values and morals utter chaos would reign in the world. In the Bible Jesus says "For out of the heart come evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornication's, the bets, false witness, slanders." (Matthew 15:19, NASB) This obviously points to the fact that our hearts are the central problem in addressing the behaviors and actions of our lives. In the Bible we also get a clear picture of the condition of the human being.

Romans 3:23 says "All have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (NASB). The logical implication is that one who has sinned (defined as a thought, action upon a thought, or behavior that is against the character and perfection of God's character) is called a "sinner". Because we have all sinned we can not experience the life God intended us to live. Our sin separates us from God and therefore is the root issue in our lives. Not every struggle is a result of personal sin though. If a client were abused, traumatized, rejected, neglected, etc. The sin is not theirs but the results of someone else's sin plays out in their life. Many people need counseling because of the sins of others, and their own. Our behaviors and actions flow directly from our sinful thoughts, actions, and desires. If someone were to live their life on a deserted island and never have any human contact they would still have the propensity and desire to be greedy, lustful, prideful, and do other things that go directly against the character of God. Society and our environment do not determine our actions as much as our own inward distorted desires.

The root issue is a heart problem, not one of need
