

THE COMMUNICATION

Communication is the act of giving, receiving, and sharing information through verbal and non-verbal methods.

Good communicators listen carefully, speak or write clearly, and respect different opinions.

In our daily life, communication helps us build relationships by allowing us to share our experiences, and needs, and helps us connect to others.

Communication and Meaning A.J Jones,2012-12-06 This essay contains material which will hopefully be of interest not only to philosophers but also to those social scientists whose research concerns the analysis of communication verbal or non verbal Although most of the topics taken up here are central to issues in the philosophy of language they are in my opinion indistinguishable from topics in descriptive social psychology The essay aims to provide a conceptual framework within which various key aspects of communication can be described and it presents a formal language using techniques from modern modal logic in which such descriptions can themselves be formulated It is my hope that this framework or parts of it might also turn out to be of value in future empirical work There are therefore essentially two sides to this essay the development of a framework of concepts and the construction of a formal language rich enough to express the elements of which that framework is composed The first of these two takes its point of departure in the statement quoted from Lewis 1972 on the page preceding this introduction The distinction drawn there by Lewis is accepted as a working hypothesis and in one sense this essay may be seen as an attempt to explore some of the consequences of that hypothesis Development,
