

Principles of Community Organization

Murray G Ross

- Discontent with existing conditions in the community must initiate and/or nourish development of the association.
- Discontent must be focussed and channelled into organisation, planning, and action in respect to specific problems.
- Discontent which initiates or sustains community organisation must be widely shared in the community.
- The association must involve leaders (both formal and informal) identified and accepted by, major sub-groups in the community.
- The association must have goals and methods and procedures of high acceptability.
- The programmes of the association should include some activities with an emotional content.
- The association should seek to utilize the manifest and latent goodwill which exists in the community.
