Action Research Communities Craig A. Mertler, 2017-09-01

Action Research Communities presents a new perspective on two current and proven educational practices classroom school based action research and professional learning communities Implementation of one or the other of these practices often results in a variety of possible benefits for the teaching learning process for student achievement and for overall school improvement While these might seem to be separate isolated practices the author has taken the beneficial aspects of each practice and merged them into a cohesive and potentially powerful concept coined action research communities Each of the two concepts or approaches action research and professional learning communities is presented and discussed in detail Because they both focus on local level improvement of educational practice and share several overlapping features the two concepts are then merged into a single entity action research communities or ARCs These professional learning communities with action research at their core hold an immense amount of power and potential when it comes to enhanced professional growth and development for educators increased student achievement school improvement and educator empowerment ARCs essentially capitalize on all the individualized benefits and strengths of action research and of professional learning communities and merge them into a single educational concept and practice ARCs have the potential to help educators everywhere experience a common and collective focus and vision sustained collaborative inquiry individualized customizable and meaningful professional growth and true empowerment that comes with this form of collaborative inquiry based and reflective practice Practical guidance for the development and implementation of ARCs is also provided by focusing on ways in which professional educators teachers administrators support staff etc can implement sustain and extend the impact of their respective action research communities Specific roles for district administrators building administrators and teachers are presented and discussed in depth as are ways that ARCs can be used both to deepen professional learning for educators and to improve student learning

Community-based Participatory Research (CBPR) as a tool for empowerment and public policy, 2009 Throughout the world civil society universities and governments are building partnerships and leaning towards participatory and community based models of inquiry in the construction of a more equitable and sustainable future These partnerships and networks have the capacity as stated in a recent UNESCO 2009 brief to co create knowledge mobilize it to inform practice and policy and enhance the social economic and environmental conditions of people communities nations and the world p 1 This type of community based planning takes the form of citizen participation and is contested to be more likely 1 Social cohesion can be defined as the interactions among members of society characterized by a set of attitudes and norms that includes trust a sense of belonging and the willingness to participate and help as well as their behavioral manifestations Chan et al It begins with a research topic of importance to the community with the aim of combining knowledge and action for social change to improve community health and eliminate health disparities The Centre for Community Based Research CCBR 3 adds to this description by describing CBR as community situated begins with a research topic of practical relevance to the community and is carried out in community settings collaborative community members and researchers equitably share control of the research agenda through active and reciprocal involvement in the research design implementati Canadian Journal of Community Mental Health, 1998 Empowerment in Community-Based Participatory Research with Persons with Developmental Disabilities, 2012 Community based participatory research CBPR is a research approach that benefits from the expertise of community members being involved in the research along all stages of a project Israel et al 2003 CBPR is often utilized with marginalized populations in order to amplify a community s voice on important issues in their lives Bastida Tseng McKeever Minkler Oden Hernandez Hidalgo 2010 This study examined empowerment definitions evolution of empowerment definitions and facilitators and barriers to community partners with and without disabilities becoming empowered through their work on a CBPR project Overall community partners definitions of empowerment related to individual and setting level characteristics Individual level empowerment was defined as self efficacy self esteem control over decision making and disability rights advocacy Facilitators to empowerment within the CBPR process were promoting inclusion promoting an accessible partnership sharing of power within and between groups and actively sharing and gaining knowledge within and between groups Inaccessible communication inaccessible language and lack of project ownership were identified as possible barriers to empowerment In most cases empowerment definitions remained stable across one s work on this project but there were instances of positive change in the lives of some community partners who expressed being empowered through the partnership CBPR provides an opportunity for persons with developmental disabilities to be included in the research processes as well as possibly gain important qualities throughout such as empowerment This study situated the individual s empowerment beliefs and behaviors within the CBPR setting identifying both facilitators and barriers and provides support that a CBPR process can be empowering for community partners Future research in collaboration with community partners should continue to focus on empowerment in all stages of the research project local collaborations and continued diversity of community engagement in research Engaging in a formal reflection process and documenting the process for other researchers to learn from diverse barriers and facilitators to empowerment is encouraged Partnerships for Empowerment Carl Wilmsen,William F. Elmendorf,Larry Fisher,Jacquelyn Ross,Brinda Sarathy,Gail Wells,2012-05-23 Participatory research has emerged as an approach to producing knowledge that is sufficiently grounded in local needs and realities to support community based natural resource management CBNRM and it is often touted as crucial to the sustainable management of forests and other natural resources This book analyses the current state of the art of participatory research in CBNRM Its chapters and case studies examine recent experiences in collaborative forest management harvesting impacts on forest shrubs watershed restoration in Native American communities civic environmentalism in an urban neighborhood and other topics Although the main geographic focus of the book is the United States the issues raised are synthesized and discussed in the context of recent critiques of participatory research and CBNRM worldwide The book s purpose is to provide insights and lessons for academics and practitioners involved in CBNRM in many contexts The issues it covers will be relevant to participatory research and CBNRM practitioners and students the world over The Foundations of Social Work Practice Mark A.
