Community Occupational Therapy with Mentally Handicapped Adults Debbie Isaac, 1990 The philosophy of normalization and promotion of the plight of children and adults with mental handicaps has drawn more public attention in recent years Governments in a number of countries have embarked upon policies involving the closure of institutions move ment of people with mental handicaps back into the community and development of community orientated programmes although their reasons for this may be economically rather than ideologically motivated Occupational therapists have moved into the community along with other health professionals in order to set up community services for people with mental handicaps. My own experience of working in a multidisciplinary team in Central London for 2½ years helping adults with mental handicaps to move out of an institution has been a source of motivation to write this book. The amount of written material available on the occupational therapy approach to resettlement and deinstitutionalization is limited in comparison with the massive amount of information written by and for other practitioners. Additionally, the number of texts written by and for occupational therapists with this client group are few. Despite excellent support from OT colleagues, I experienced considerable frustration trying to define and perform my role, not helped by a shortage of texts to draw on.

Vocational and Technical Resources for Community College Libraries Mary Ann Laun, 1995     Psychosocial Occupational Therapy Rita P. Fleming Cottrell, 1993     Choice, 2006     Service-Learning in Occupational Therapy Education Kathleen Flecky, Lynn Gitlow, 2009-11-13

Service Learning in Occupational Therapy Education: Philosophy and Practice explores the use of service learning as a pedagogical tool for educators to enhance occupational therapy students' knowledge and skills in the areas of critical thinking and problem solving, diversity, health promotion, community issues, social justice, and citizenship. These areas are representative of core competencies needed by occupational therapy professionals for occupation-based practice in the 21st century. This text describes philosophical and theoretical principles of service learning in relationship to occupational therapy philosophical and pedagogical traditions. Effective service learning educational strategies and experiential applications of occupational therapy in the community are highlighted through the presentation of case studies of service learning initiatives in occupational therapy programs across the United States. Examples of how to design, implement, and assess service learning projects and partnerships are provided along with insights and lessons learned from faculty engaging in service learning. Description of the relevance and congruence of philosophical and theoretical traditions of service learning and occupational therapy. Links service learning specifically to occupational therapy education, faculty, and student-friendly exercises and reflective activities on practice. Samples of how to initiate partnerships, develop course objectives and syllabi aligned with Accreditation Council of Occupational Therapy Education (ACOTE) guidelines, readings, websites, and course support materials, as well as project and student assessment tools. Description of lessons learned from faculty, including the strengths and challenges of service learning based on qualitative and quantitative assessment results and community-based research.
