Cold War Workers Isabel Campbell, 2025-04-15 When Canada sought to protect its borders and aid its allies during the Cold War many people were recruited to build the emerging security state as construction and maintenance workers engineers members of the armed forces medical researchers and research subjects Security work transformed the lives of individuals families and communities in ways that were both predictable and surprising and both beneficial and harmful the militarization and colonization of Indigenous lives and lands was especially disruptive The opening essays of Cold War Workers intimately portray the complicated effects of Cold War labour upon Indigenous lives Elmer Sinclair a residential school survivor and member of the Canadian Armed Forces achieved equality with white men through his militarized masculinity His more positive professional experience contrasts with those of Indigenous workers on northern radar lines many of whom lost languages connections to the land and other elements of traditional cultures as they sought new skills and better employment Diverse Indigenous experiences of Cold War security work set the scene for the second set of essays which explore the impact of security preoccupations on marginalized groups the study of extreme isolation through scientific experimentation on human subjects the targeting of gay men with psychiatric labelling to enforce an idealized masculinity and the restriction of gender mobility in the Canadian military and the pushback from servicewomen Cold War Workers raises questions about the influence of settler colonial masculine institutional values on those who laboured for the Cold War state and society By comparing the experiences of different types of workers families and communities this volume reveals how race gender and privilege affected people in varied and sometimes unexpected ways
