

Communicating Public Health Guidance to Cases and Contacts

Recommendations for COVID-19 Case Investigators and Contact Tracers

Introduction

The COVID-19 pandemic has devastated communities both in the United States and abroad. The fear, uncertainty, and trauma caused by the pandemic also affect how individuals interpret public health messages. It is important for case investigators and contact tracers to understand how this stress affects a person's ability to understand public health messages, and to tailor their communications accordingly. This brief outlines actions that case investigators and contact tracers may take to communicate effectively.

Recommendations

- Keep the message concise: When a person is under stress, it may be difficult for them to take in large pieces of information. Keep your message simple. Avoid extensive background, jargon, or technical information.
  - Example: When describing the Omicron variant, you may choose to say, "It's another version of the virus that causes COVID-19." Avoid technical information such as, "Omicron has four mutations in positions 142-145 that fall within the NTD-Antigenic Supersite."
- Repeat the main message: Stress may produce anxiety, which could cause someone to forget your message. Repeating the main message can ensure that the person remembers what you are trying to convey. Ask yourself: what is it that the case or contact needs to know?
  - Example: If you're informing the contact that they should get tested if they develop symptoms, try repeating this statement in the beginning, middle, and end of your conversation.
- Provide 3-4 action steps: Under normal circumstances, individuals only remember 3-7 pieces of information at a time. However, when under stress, people are often able to remember as few as three simple directions (i.e., "stop, drop, and roll" are directions often used for a fire response). Try to summarize public health guidance in 3-4 simple action steps.
  - Example: When providing quarantine instructions to a contact, you may choose to say, "Stay home, wear a mask around others, and get tested."
- Give positive action steps: When under stress, it is easy to forget, overlook, or confuse words like "no" or "not." When possible, frame action steps in a positive way.

Communicating In Public:

Communicating Public Health Risk José Sixto-García, Sara Pérez-Seijo, Berta García-Orosa, 2024-10-01 This important volume provides not only an in depth analysis of those risk communication strategies currently used to inform and educate the public around key health issues but also the risks and effects of radon a natural but carcinogenic gas that so far has seen relatively little wider coverage As the leading cause of lung cancer worldwide after smoking radon is an important yet hidden public health issue but informing and educating the public about its hazards and dangers is far from straightforward As well as offering a detailed overview of issues around radon itself the book asserts that public health communication should be dialogic and interactive culturally tailored to specific populations to ensure people comprehend and appreciate risk to themselves and their environments The challenges are of course significant in a pluralistic media landscape where disinformation and misinformation threaten the integrity of any message sent Featuring chapters from researchers across a range of disciplines this enlightening book will interest students scholars and professionals working in Public Health Environment Health and Communication Studies      Principles and Practice of Public Health Surveillance Lisa M. Devereux, Anne Peirson-Smith, 2011-12-08 Public Relations in Asia Pacific reflects the growing professionalism in the practice of public relations in the world's fastest expanding economy. It is a carefully drawn road map both strategically and tactically for all manner of entities for profit and not for profit on how to establish and maintain effective relationships with their numerous stakeholders. Particularly insightful are the many examples of public relations in action within the Asia Pacific region. It's a must read for those interested in public relations careers and those new to the profession and it's a first rate refresher for the established professional. Harold Burson, Founding Chairman, Burson Marsteller Worldwide; Mary Devereux and Anne Peirson Smith have combined their considerable talents and experience to produce a bible of how public relations is and should be practiced in the Asia Pacific. One of its many virtues is that it debunks the myth that PR is just one long lunch hosted by caricature Svengalis and Spin Doctors. Rather it sets the profession in a cultural context that will be valuable to those starting at PR 101 professionals and corporate executives who want to know how truth can be well told with all due credit to McCann Erickson, Kerry McGlynn, Special Adviser, Corporate Communication Department, Cathay Pacific Airways. As greater social pluralism, stakeholder influence and internet driven consumer sophistication and empowerment grow relentlessly across nearly all Asian societies, Public Relations in Asia Pacific is a timely guide to the critical role of good public relations. Clear, helpful and with a wealth of good examples of how best practice PR in action can make real and tangible contributions to governments, businesses, NGOs as well as to ordinary people, this is essential reading for anyone concerned with how to communicate well in the world's fastest growing economic region. Tim Sutton, Chairman, Asia Pacific, Weber Shandwick. In an increasingly globalized world, public relations practices and strategies become critical for organizations to communicate effectively to their diverse audiences worldwide. This book is therefore an extremely timely and relevant contribution to PR students and practitioners in the Asia Pacific region as it provides not only a comprehensive overview of the essential concepts and skills of public relations but also specific case studies which illustrate tactical uses of public relations across a wide range of issues and countries. In my opinion, this book fills a major gap in the understanding of public relations concepts and practices and will constitute a fundamental resource for all those who aspire to excel within the field.
