HC 262 - Community Rights Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Communities and Local Government Committee, 2015 The Government's policy of empowering people through Community Rights to save local assets from closure build community housing take over local authority services and bring public land back into use has in its first two years had mixed results The Rights to Bid to Build to Challenge and to Reclaim Land have generated some successes with a small number of community groups being able for example to use the Community Right to Bid to stop valued local assets such as the local pub being sold for redevelopment But limitations have also been exposed The Community Right to Build is too complicated the Community Right to Challenge which triggers a tendering exercise to run a local service risks damaging relations between communities and local government and is a gamble for groups wanting to run a local service as they may be outbid and the Community Right to Reclaim Land has hardly been used The Committee wants to see the Rights improved so that local people have more say over what happens to the land buildings and services in their area The Government should enhance the Community Right to Bid by increasing from six to nine months the time people have to bid to buy a local asset make it easier to remove or restrict the permitted development exemption from planning control when an asset has been listed as having Community Value and make an asset's status as an Asset of Community Value a material consideration in all but minor planning applications
